Attention

In time to any irregularity of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels may prevent serious consequences. Indigestion, costiveness, headache, nausea, biliousness, and vertigo indicate certain functional derangements, the best remedy for which is Ayer's Pills. Purely vegetable, sugar-coated, easy to take and quick to assimilate, this is the ideal family medicine—the most popular, safe, and useful aperient in pharmacy. Mrs. M. A. BROCKWELL, Harris, Tenn., says:

"Ayer's Cathartic Pills cured me of sick headache and my husband of neuralgia. We think there is

No Better Medicine,

and have induced many to use it.

"Thirty-five years ago this Spring, I was run down by hard work and a succession of colds, which made me so feeble that it was an effort for me to walk. I consulted the doctors, but kept sinking lower until I had given up all hope of ever being better. Happening to be in a store, one day, where medicines were sold, the proprietor noticed my weak and sickly appearance, and, after a few questions as to my health, recommended me to try Ayer's Pills. I had little faith in these or any other medicine, but concluded, at last, to take his advice and try a box. Before I had used them all, I was very much better, and two boxes cured me. I am now 80 years old; but I believe that if it had not been for Ayer's Pills, I should have been in my grave long ago. I buy 6 boxes every year, which make 210 boxes up to this time, and I would no more be without them than without bread."—H. H. Ingraham, Rockland, Me.

RESOLVED, that said Robert C. Dunn of Princeton, Minn., is the first and only choice of the republicans of Crow Wing county for the office of state auditor and the delegates from this county are hereby requested and instructed to support him for said office in the next republican state convention.

The convention then adjourned.

Journalism is Improving.

Journalism at Brainerd is improving. Two of the newspaper publishers have joined the church as a result of Evangelist Hunt's visit, and great pressure is being brought to bear upon the third man. First and foremost came Editor Halstead into open court and yielded up the fight with his satanic majesty who is so aggressive. This was not very suprising, for Halstead was a Republican. But when Editor Stivers, who not for any religous traits has been known as "the friar," made this week a public confession of faith; threw four columns of saloon "ads," out of his paper, and was recived into the church. This was a sensation. The friar is a Democrat. Editor "Bob" Ingersoll is the only remaining editor in the City of Pine, untouched by Hunt's eloquence, and he cannot hope to hold out much longer.—St. Cloud Journal Press.

Republicans Are Alert.

EDITORS DISPATCH:—A republican caucus was called for this precinct for Tuesday night last, the purpose being the election of delegates to the county convention. Promptly at 8 o'clock the school house was filled with earnest, intelligent farmers. After the stated business had been transacted short impromptu addresses were made by Charley Kreck, G. G. Thompson, D. Holmes and A. G. Emmons, and while none of the speakers lay any claim to being public orators, they showed a happy faculty of touching a responsive chord in the hearts of their hearers, and were heartily applauded. Democrats of life long standing fairly tumbled over each other in their eagerness to affiliate with the party that champions protection to American labor and American industries. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Davenport's will be "in line."

A REPUBLICAN.

Cut and Dried.

The politicians have no use for Senator Geissel and he is to be placed upon the shelf this year, so it has been whispered to us. His name will not even be mentioned when the bosses meet in convention. The thing has been all cut and dried and Dr. Hemstead, of Brainerd, will be nominated for senator. In what has Senator Geissel so greviously sinned that he should be treated thus? Mr. Geissel is deserving of better treatment at the hands of Democrats of this district. Simple justice demand that it be unanimous, providing he wants it. But the Little Falls politicians have so decreed and Geissel must be shelved.—Royalton Banner.

Re-varnish your buggies once a year at Congdon's.

Things Political.

Aitkin will endeavor to get the democratic congressional convention.

P. V. Coppernoll is hustling for the nomination as judge of the Fifteenth judicial district.

If the pine land ring succeeds in turning down the people's candidate for state auditor, R. C. Dunn, the people had better turn the state government over to them entirely.

Duluth will go over to Brainerd with a big delegation Aug. 28, and do her part towards making the day a big one. Brainerd will give us all a cordial welcome, and will help us out in nominating our candidate—will we offend the Towne men if we say—Hon. O. D. Kinney?—News Tribune.

The Aitkin Age says it has heard that several of their prominent Republican's entertain an ambition to represent this district in the next legislature. All of the aspirants, if they are such, would doubtless make creditable representatives, but Brother Benard of the Grand Rapids Magnet who may be supposed to be on the inside of Republican politics has informed the Minneapolis Tribune that the next senator from this district will be D. M. Gunn of Grand Rapids and the representative a Hubbard county man.

It is certain that R. C. Dunn will have the solid vote of the delegates from the counties of the Sixth congressional district. This is as it should be. He is now one of the most prominent candidates in the field for a state office and is assured of support from all parts of the state. This entitles him, taken in connection with his known ability and his service to the state in the pine land cases, to a cordial hearty and solid support from this congressional district. All the leading Republicans of the district, nearly, are now agreed upon the wisdom and justice of this course. It matters not how many other candidates for the state offices there are from the Sixth district. His nomination may affect some of the others, but that is their misfortune, and it would be folly to take support from him to aid them, when by so doing it might endanger his nomination.

The first candidate to be voted for in the convention from the Sixth district will be Bob Dunn, and unless we greatly err, he will get the entire 31 votes from St. Louis county, and they will stand by him as long as he needs them or long as they will do him any good. It will not be half hearted support, but an earnest one from the word go.—Duluth News Tribune.

A Colored Woman's White Rats.

If the Pied Piper of Hamelin should ever take it into his head to pay Washington a visit, he would find that he had a rival already installed here and the field fully occupied. The rival in question is Sarah Baker, a colored woman who lives in Georgetown, near the junction of Congress street and the canal. She raises white rats, not for sale or profit, but merely for the love of the rats. Her room, where she and her four footed, long-tailed proteges reside, is a queer apartment, filled up with cages, piled one over the other, and scores if not hundreds of the pink eyed, snowy furred rodents, making up such a ratful vision as would ruin the trade of the best saloon in Washington if the customers had to pass through it on their way after a drink.

The rats are all the descendants of two or three pairs that were given to a woman a year or two ago. They multiplied and increased, and declining to kill any of them Mrs. Baker provided new cages as the rats filled up their old quarters, until now it takes her the better part of her spare time to feed and attend to the wants of her file tailed family.

The rats all know her and will come to the front of their cages and take food from between her lips, or if given the liberty of the room some of the corpulent old fellows will sit upright on the palm of her hand and wash their faces and comb out their whiskers with the gravity of a burgomaster.—Washington Post.

Care of the Shoes.

Nothing is more damaging to fine finished leather than a coating of soil left to harden upon the shoes. The care of shoes, after exposure to wet and mud, is more in theory than in practice, The coating of soil kills the surface of the leather and leaves innumerable fine scratches upon it. Notice people on the street of a damp, sloppy day, and you will find that at least half of them do not wear rubbers. Some people won't wear them at all except in snow or slush. Tender feet, the trouble of putting them on and off and the liability to leave them behind are reasons for eschewing them.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Her Hope.

Myrtylla—So you are going to marry old Mr. Goldrocks?

Ethylle—Yes, I am.

Myrtylla—Why, he's almost 60 years old and has buried six wives.

Ethylle—I know all that, but I do not doubt you remember the story of the pitcher that went to the well. I hope to break the spell.—Vogue.

No action has been instituted at law to recover the amount secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

There was due on said mortgage debt on the 30th day of October, A. D. 1893, the sum of five hundred and eighty-three dollars and forty-four cents ($583.44), and said mortgagee had, besides the security herein mentioned, other security for said debt, which security was duly advertised for sale, and duly sold, and after paying the costs and disbursements of said sale, left remaining the sum of ninety-two dollars and thirty cents ($92.30) to apply on said debt and the interest thereon, and at the time of said sale, left still due and owing said mortgagee the sum of four hundred and ninety-four dollars and twenty-one cents ($494.21). There is claimed to be now due thereon, and is actually due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of five hundred and ten dollars and one cent ($510.01), which includes four hundred and ninety-four dollars and twenty-one cents ($494.21) principal, and fifteen dollars and eighty cents ($15.80) interest.

And whereas, it is stipulated in said mortgage that in case of default in the payment of principal or interest or any part thereof when due, then and in that case, the said mortgagee might declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage due and payable at once.

And whereas, default has been made in the payment of the interest, and the said mortgagee has elected to declare the whole sum due.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by reason of said default and by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed, and the premises therein described will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest and twenty-five dollars ($25.00) attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure thereof, and costs and disbursements allowed by law, which sale will be made by the sheriff of the county of Crow Wing and State of Minnesota, at the front door of the county court house, in the City of Brainerd, in said county and state, on Saturday the 23rd day of June A. D. 1894, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of sale, as provided by law.

A Multitude of Counsel.

The opinion is rapidly gaining ground that a remedy which has proved efficient in the hands of the skillful practioner, a remedy prepared by him as the result of years of observation and experience, for the treatment of disease in individual cases, may, if placed by the same practitioner within the reach of the reading public, be instrumental in curing many who otherwise have remained ignorant of it. HOW A [illegible] SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examinations and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated M. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing use, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Attention

In time to any irregularity of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels may prevent serious consequences. Indigestion, costiveness, headache, nausea, biliousness, and vertigo indicate certain functional derangements, the best remedy for which is Ayer's Pills. Purely vegetable, sugar-coated, easy to take and quick to assimilate, this is the ideal family medicine—the most popular, safe, and useful aperient in pharmacy. Mrs. M. A. BROCKWELL, Harris, Tenn., says:

"Ayer's Cathartic Pills cured me of sick headache and my husband of neuralgia. We think there is

No Better Medicine,

and have induced many to use it.

"Thirty-five years ago this Spring, I was run down by hard work and a succession of colds, which made me so feeble that it was an effort for me to walk. I consulted the doctors, but kept sinking lower until I had given up all hope of ever being better. Happening to be in a store, one day, where medicines were sold, the proprietor noticed my weak and sickly appearance, and, after a few questions as to my health, recommended me to try Ayer's Pills. I had little faith in these or any other medicine, but concluded, at last, to take his advice and try a box. Before I had used them all, I was very much better, and two boxes cured me. I am now 80 years old; but I believe that if it had not been for Ayer's Pills, I should have been in my grave long ago. I buy 6 boxes every year, which make 210 boxes up to this time, and I would no more be without them than without bread."—H. H. Ingraham, Rockland, Me.

Resolutions were passed among which was the following:

WHEREAS, Hon R. C. Dunn by exposing the frauds in the sale of certain pine timber of the state has proven himself an honorable and fearless representative of the people and has saved many thousands of dollars to the common schools of the state

RESOLVED, that said Robert C. Dunn of Princeton, Minn., is the first and only choice of the republicans of Crow Wing county for the office of state auditor and the delegates from this county are hereby requested and instructed to support him for said office in the next republican state convention.

The convention then adjourned.

Journalism is Improving.

Journalism at Brainerd is improving. Two of the newspaper publishers have joined the church as a result of Evangelist Hunt's visit, and great pressure is being brought to bear upon the third man. First and foremost came Editor Halstead into open court and yielded up the fight with his satanic majesty who is so aggressive. This was not very suprising, for Halstead was a Republican. But when Editor Stivers, who not for any religous traits has been known as "the friar," made this week a public confession of faith; threw four columns of saloon "ads," out of his paper, and was recived into the church. This was a sensation. The friar is a Democrat. Editor "Bob" Ingersoll is the only remaining editor in the City of Pine, untouched by Hunt's eloquence, and he cannot hope to hold out much longer.—St. Cloud Journal Press.

Republicans Are Alert.

EDITORS DISPATCH:—A republican caucus was called for this precinct for Tuesday night last, the purpose being the election of delegates to the county convention. Promptly at 8 o'clock the school house was filled with earnest, intelligent farmers. After the stated business had been transacted short impromptu addresses were made by Charley Kreck, G. G. Thompson, D. Holmes and A. G. Emmons, and while none of the speakers lay any claim to being public orators, they showed a happy faculty of touching a responsive chord in the hearts of their hearers, and were heartily applauded. Democrats of life long standing fairly tumbled over each other in their eagerness to affiliate with the party that champions protection to American labor and American industries. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Davenport's will be "in line."

A REPUBLICAN.

Cut and Dried.

The politicians have no use for Senator Geissel and he is to be placed upon the shelf this year, so it has been whispered to us. His name will not even be mentioned when the bosses meet in convention. The thing has been all cut and dried and Dr. Hemstead, of Brainerd, will be nominated for senator. In what has Senator Geissel so greviously sinned that he should be treated thus? Mr. Geissel is deserving of better treatment at the hands of Democrats of this district. Simple justice demand that it be unanimous, providing he wants it. But the Little Falls politicians have so decreed and Geissel must be shelved.—Royalton Banner.

Things Political.

Aitkin will endeavor to get the democratic congressional convention.

P. V. Coppernoll is hustling for the nomination as judge of the Fifteenth judicial district.

If the pine land ring succeeds in turning down the people's candidate for state auditor, R. C. Dunn, the people had better turn the state government over to them entirely.

Duluth will go over to Brainerd with a big delegation Aug. 28, and do her part towards making the day a big one. Brainerd will give us all a cordial welcome, and will help us out in nominating our candidate—will we offend the Towne men if we say—Hon. O. D. Kinney?—News Tribune.

The Aitkin Age says it has heard that several of their prominent Republican's entertain an ambition to represent this district in the next legislature. All of the aspirants, if they are such, would doubtless make creditable representatives, but Brother Benard of the Grand Rapids Magnet who may be supposed to be on the inside of Republican politics has informed the Minneapolis Tribune that the next senator from this district will be D. M. Gunn of Grand Rapids and the representative a Hubbard county man.

It is certain that R. C. Dunn will have the solid vote of the delegates from the counties of the Sixth congressional district. This is as it should be. He is now one of the most prominent candidates in the field for a state office and is assured of support from all parts of the state. This entitles him, taken in connection with his known ability and his service to the state in the pine land cases, to a cordial hearty and solid support from this congressional district. All the leading Republicans of the district, nearly, are now agreed upon the wisdom and justice of this course. It matters not how many other candidates for the state offices there are from the Sixth district. His nomination may affect some of the others, but that is their misfortune, and it would be folly to take support from him to aid them, when by so doing it might endanger his nomination.

The first candidate to be voted for in the convention from the Sixth district will be Bob Dunn, and unless we greatly err, he will get the entire 31 votes from St. Louis county, and they will stand by him as long as he needs them or long as they will do him any good. It will not be half hearted support, but an earnest one from the word go.—Duluth News Tribune.

A Colored Woman's White Rats.

If the Pied Piper of Hamelin should ever take it into his head to pay Washington a visit, he would find that he had a rival already installed here and the field fully occupied. The rival in question is Sarah Baker, a colored woman who lives in Georgetown, near the junction of Congress street and the canal. She raises white rats, not for sale or profit, but merely for the love of the rats. Her room, where she and her four footed, long-tailed proteges reside, is a queer apartment, filled up with cages, piled one over the other, and scores if not hundreds of the pink eyed, snowy furred rodents, making up such a ratful vision as would ruin the trade of the best saloon in Washington if the customers had to pass through it on their way after a drink.

The rats are all the descendants of two or three pairs that were given to a woman a year or two ago. They multiplied and increased, and declining to kill any of them Mrs. Baker provided new cages as the rats filled up their old quarters, until now it takes her the better part of her spare time to feed and attend to the wants of her file tailed family.

The rats all know her and will come to the front of their cages and take food from between her lips, or if given the liberty of the room some of the corpulent old fellows will sit upright on the palm of her hand and wash their faces and comb out their whiskers with the gravity of a burgomaster.—Washington Post.

Care of the Shoes.

Nothing is more damaging to fine finished leather than a coating of soil left to harden upon the shoes. The care of shoes, after exposure to wet and mud, is more in theory than in practice. The coating of soil kills the surface of the leather and leaves innumerable fine scratches upon it. Notice people on the street of a damp, sloppy day, and you will find that at least half of them do not wear rubbers. Some people won't wear them at all except in snow or slush. Tender feet, the trouble of putting them on and off and the liability to leave them behind are reasons for eschewing them.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Her Hope.

Myrtylla—So you are going to marry old Mr. Goldrocks?

Ethylle—Yes, I am.

Myrtylla—Why, he's almost 60 years old and has buried six wives.

Ethylle—I know all that, but I do not doubt you remember the story of the pitcher that went to the well. I hope to break the spell.—Vogue.

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made and dated March 10th A. D. 1891 by Emile Gelinas and Josephine Gelinas, his wife, mortgagors, to The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, Limited, mortgagee, and duly filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Crow Wing and State of Minnesota, on the 14th day of March A. D. 1891, at ten o'clock and thirty minutes A. M. in Book I, of Mortgages on page 620, conveying and mortgaging the following described land lying and being in the county of Crow Wing and State of Minnesota, to-wit:—The north half (½) of the southeast quarter and the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of Section thirty-five (35) of township forty-three (43) range thirty-two (32) containing one hundred and twenty (120) acres, more or less, according to the Government survey thereof.

No action has been instituted at law to recover the amount secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

There was due on said mortgage debt on the 30th day of October, A. D. 1893, the sum of five hundred and eighty-three dollars and forty-four cents ($583.44), and said mortgagee had, besides the security herein mentioned, other security for said debt, which security was duly advertised for sale, and duly sold, and after paying the costs and disbursements of said sale, left remaining the sum of ninety-two dollars and thirty cents ($92.30) to apply on said debt and the interest thereon, and at the time of said sale, left still due and owing said mortgagee the sum of four hundred and ninety-four dollars and twenty-one cents ($494.21). There is claimed to be now due thereon, and is actually due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of five hundred and ten dollars and one cent ($510.01), which includes four hundred and ninety-four dollars and twenty-one cents ($494.21) principal, and fifteen dollars and eighty cents ($15.80) interest.

And whereas, it is stipulated in said mortgage that in case of default in the payment of principal or interest or any part thereof when due, then and in that case, the said mortgagee might declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage due and payable at once.

And whereas, default has been made in the payment of the interest, and the said mortgagee has elected to declare the whole sum due,

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by reason of said default and by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed, and the premises therein described will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest and twenty-five dollars ($25.00) attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure thereof, and costs and disbursements allowed by law, which sale will be made by the sheriff of the county of Crow Wing and State of Minnesota, at the front door of the county court house, in the City of Brainerd, in said county and state, on Saturday the 23rd day of June A. D. 1894, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of sale, as provided by law.

A Multitude of Counsel.

The opinion is rapidly gaining ground that a remedy which has proved efficient in the hands of the skillful practioner, a remedy prepared by him as the result of years of observation and experience, for the treatment of disease in individual cases, may, if placed by the same practitioner within the reach of the reading public, be instrumental in curing many who otherwise have remained ignorant of it. HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examinations and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

BRAINERD. - - - - MINN.

Immense schools of weakfish have made their appearance off Anglesea. Catches of 100 fish to a man are common. The fish run from one to two pounds in weight.

One of the oldest tunes in the world is said to be the air sung to the words "We won't go home till morning." It is known to date back to the time of the Crusaders.

It would appear from a London cablegram that it's "Scotland to the rescue." Several Scotch coal owners have shipped a number of steamer loads of coal to New York in consequence of the coal strikers in the United States.

The London paper the African Review devoted to the interests of the dark continent, will be edited by the author of "She." If vivid imagination is the chief talent sought, Mr. Haggard has the requirements.

Mrs. Lease lies in a hotel at Olathe, Kas., seriously ill from nervous prostration because of a persistent crank who follows her and threatens her life. Lock the fellow up. The country cannot afford to lose its most distinctive political figure.

Anna Gould's engagement to Harriman has been been broken off and Howard denies his alliance. It is hard to believe that those young people, apparently so blessed with everything that mortal heart can desire, are practicing for the stage, but it looks that way.

The resignation of the French ministry following its defeat on what appears to be a question of small importance, is indicative of the very slender tenure on which it has held office. There are so many factions in the French chamber of deputies that it is difficult to form a ministry which can command a majority on all the numerous issues which come up in that body.

Base ball has broken out with great severity among the Indians on the Western plains. It is a little singular that the noble red man always adopts the vices, but not the virtues of his white brother. He takes to the smallpox and whisky bottle as naturally as a duck takes to water, and it now seems probable that the race decimation will be completed by indulgence in the base ball mania.

The storm of last week did all kinds of mischief on the lakes and in Chicago. One of its unkind deeds was the destruction of the famous old cottonwood tree that stood on the site of the Dearborn massacre. The remains have been pretty thoroughly appropriated already for souvenir purposes by people who appreciate what a place the veteran had in the history and traditions of Chicago.

Keep Them Growing.

Your domestic animals of all kinds must be kept in prime healthy growing condition in order to make profitable ones. Any animal which is stunted in its early youth will fail to make as good an ultimate development as it would have done otherwise, no matter how much you may pamper it in after life, and whatever is accomplished later on is done at far greater cost than would have been the case if it had been given a fair start. It is just the same with growing stock as with growing a crop—you cannot by subsequent cultivation make amends for neglecting the initial preparation.

It should be understood that good feeding and over-feeding are not the same things. Good feeding consists in supplying such amount and quality as can be easily digested and assimilated, and neither more nor less. It is only such food which at all benefits an animal. Excessive feeding decreases the power of assimilation, as an overloaded stomach cannot properly do the work which nature intended it should. In order to determine the line between good feeding and over-feeding the personal traits of each animal should be studied. Economy and correct methods of feeding can only be reached when you feed individually.

The method of feeding stock should vary, according to the end you wish to serve. One ration may be best for growth, another for fattening, and still another for milk and butter. To decide between these you should know something of the nutritive values of different foods and to combine them to the best effect. If you do not, you cannot procure the fullest possible profit from your work.—Exchange.

The Characters in "Marcella."

As might have been expected, continues the same entertaining gossip, the infallible ones among us have set themselves to work to identify the characters in Mrs. Ward's new novel, "Marcella." It was not, however, a matter of great difficulty to find the "Fabian" in the "Venturist Society," or the Labor Collector in the "Labor Clarion," but those only who are well behind the scenes will be able to pick out Messrs. William Morris, Walter Crane, Keir Hardie and Champion. Marcella, herself, is said to be a judicious amalgam of Lady Carlisle and Miss Margaret Harkness, so much at the time beloved of the "Dockers." Mr. Arthur Balfour is supposed to figure in the novel in the disguise of Aldous Raeburn. It is decidedly a relief to turn from the "neurotic" women who have had recently such a very long inning to the girl whose mistakes are the result of noble, but misdirected "enthusiasm for humanity." Marcella does not clamor for more worlds (of men) to conquer! She aims, not always wisely, but with the zeal of an ardent crusader, at the regeneration of the world.—Ladies' Pictorial.

An English May Day.

Baroness Burdette-Coutts clasped the gold chain and cross that Mr. Ruskin annually gives to the "May Queen" at Whitelands College, Chelsea, round the neck of Miss Emma Hands, the young lady elected to that pretty distinction by her fellow-students. The May Day observances began with a festal service in the college chapel, which was beautifully decorated with spring flowers; and after last year's "Queen Dowager" had gracefully abdicated, and a chaplet of apple blossoms had been placed on the head of the newly found sovereign, an intricate May-pole dance was performed in the great hall while the "Queen" retired to assume her regal robes. Baroness Burdett-Coutts said that she hoped the day would be a pleasantly memorable one in all their young lives, and that the winner of Mr. Ruskin's beautiful gift would find it one of her greatest pleasures in the future to bring to other minds and homes some of the lessons of love and gentleness to be found in his works.—London Telegraph.

HONOR SOLDIER DEAD

DECORATION DAY OBSERVED THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.

Washington Cemeteries Visited by Immense Throngs—Beautiful Floral Tributes Left at the Tombs of Lincoln and Grant.

Washington, May 30.—Decoration day was observed here here even more generally than heretofore. All the government buildings were closed most of the day and business throughout the city was generally suspended. The various cemeteries were visited by throngs, especially Arlington, where rest so many illustrious dead.

New York, May 30.—The usual Decoration day ceremonies were held in this city. As usual, since the death of Gen. Grant, Riverside Park was the center of attraction, and an immense number of floral tributes were left at the tomb of the dead soldier.

Springfield, Ill., May 30. — Oakridge cemetery, in which stands the monument erected to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, and where the remains of the martyr president lie, was visited to-day by thousands of people, and many beautiful floral tributes were placed in the tomb. Special services were held at the base of the monument during the afternoon.

St. Paul, May 30.—Decoration day was celebrated generally throughout the Northwest. In St. Paul and Minneapolis special services were held in many churches and at the various cemeteries.

SWEPT BY FLOODS.

Enormous Loss of Life and Property From the Bursting of a Dam.

Calcutta, May 30.—In addition to the loss of 200 lives by the bursting of a dam, formed by a land-slip in Charkkupria, Kulu, and the destruction of live stock and dwellings which accompanied it, disastrous floods have wrought much damage in North Cachar. The Jetinga has overflowed its banks and has inundated an area of hundreds of miles. The result of this inundation has been a tremendous loss of property, and in addition the loss of life is believed to be enormous. Whole villages have been destroyed in a number of sections of the flood-visited country. The flood is pronounced to be the most severe in many years. The water swept onward like a forty-foot wall, sweeping away several villages, among them one having eighty houses.

BALLOT FRAUDS CONFESSED.

Sutherland Tells of Fictitious Votes Cast at the Neovember Election.

New York, May 30.—When Kenneth Sutherland, companion of John Y. McKane in Gravesend election frauds, was brought into court for sentence, a written confession by the prisoner was read. In it he said that of his own knowledge between 800 and 900 fictitious votes were cast out of a total of 1,512 in the Second district alone, and that the whole number of fictitious votes cast at the November election in Gravesend was about 1,500. "I folded with my own hands two lots of paper ballots, each 100 or 200 in number, which were fictitiously cast in my presence on that day." In 1892, according to Sutherland, out of a total of 2,000 votes cast 1,200 were fictitious. He refused to inculpate others in his confession.

Perrin Dying.

New London, Wis., May 30.—Phelps Perrin, recently pardoned after serving nearly five years for the theft of $40,000 from the Iron Exchange bank at Hurley, is dying. He has been unconscious for nearly thirty-six hours and can live but a short time. Perrin is at his mother's home here. He has made no confession, and, as the money stolen from the Hurley bank was buried by Perrin after he and Baker separated after the deed, it is believed the money will be lost. Baker, it is said, does not know where the money is concealed.

Prospective Lynching.

Omaha, May 30.—A Lexington, Neb., special to the Bee says: A mob is now organized here to take from jail Ben Hitton and William Thompson, charged with raping a sixteen-year-old girl and lynch them. The mob banished Rufus Gun and Sam Robert, giving them three minutes to leave town or be tarred and feathered. There are three murderers confined in the jail.

Ramsey Defeated.

Denver, May 30.—The railway telegraphers' election to-day resulted in defeat for Grand Chief Telegrapher Ramsey, his successor being Walter V. Powell of Wichita, Kan. The vote stood 59 to 56. The telegraphers indorsed the action of Grand Chief Ramsey in suspending the Omaha charter, and expressed a willingness to restore the charter if the Omaha division would obey Ramsey's former orders. F. E. Gilliland promised it would be done.

The Countess Unworthy.

London, May 30. — Countess Russell has asked the courts for leave to petition for a restoration of conjugal rites with her husband, Earl Russell. The latter pleads that the petitioner has been guilty of cruelty in alleging a disgraceful offense against him, and that, therefore, she is not entitled to her restoration of conjugal rights. Leave, however, was granted the countess to make the petition as requested.

Prof. Dowe Is Safe.

Chicago, May 30.—The police were today notified by the friends of Prof. John Dowe, of the South Dakota university, that they had learned that he was now on the ocean, bound for Scotland. For several days the professor's friends have been concerned about him, as he left a large amount of personal baggage in Chicago, and it was feared he had met with some mishap.

Breckinridge Won't Talk.

Louisville, Ky., May 30.—A special to the Times from Lexington says: Congressman Breckinridge will express no opinion about Judge Bradley's ruling. He says that he will carry the matter to the supreme court and test it there.

Frye Is Honored.

Cincinnati, May 30.—Gen. Frye has just received a commission from Coxey as commander-in-chief of the commonweal army of the United States. Gen. Frye has gone to Hyattsville, where he will make his headquarters.

A Spencer Iowa, Girl and Her Most Remarkable Marriage.

Spencer Iowa, Special.—The marriage of Miss Etta Tracy of Spencer to Dr. Woodcock of New York was consummated yesterday. The contracting parties first met at Arnold's Park, where the young lady was employed as a dining room girl, and 'tis said the groom was first attracted by the kindness of the girl who, when he was helpless, was so accommodating as to lace his shoes, which favor the other girls had refused, though he pleaded his inability to perform this service for himself, owing to lumbar rheumatism. The infatuated gentleman proposed marriage, and in order to fit her for the position of wife, placed her in a good school, he taking up his residence near. This spring the romantic courtship was terminated in the most happy manner, and the loving pair will spend some time wandering among the wonders of the old world, when, it is said, they propose to return and make Spencer their home.

Indian Affairs.

Washington Special.—The senate committee on Indian affairs authorized a favorable report on the bill providing for the opening of the Untah and Uncompagre Indian reservations in Utah. The bill provides for the allotment of a portion of the land of the reservations in severalty to the Indians, and the opening of that remaining to settlement. The committee also ordered favorably reported an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill introduced by Senator Pettigrew for the ratification of the treaty with the Yankton Sioux Indians.

Bourgeois Decline.

New York, Special—The Herald's dispatch from Paris says: M. Bourgeois has declined to accept the responsibility of forming a ministry, and no one else has thus far been selected for the task. It will not be astonishing, however, if M. Boulanger, the present minister of colonies, should play an important role in the next ministerial combination.

WHITE CAP OUTRAGE.

One Man Killed and Four Others Wounded.

New Orleans, May 30.—The town of New Road, the seat of justice of Pointe Coupee parish, was the scene the other night of a serious White Cap outrage, full particulars of which are not yet known because of the isolation of the town. George Paul, an aged negro, offended one of the White Caps. A party of the latter called at the negro's house for the purpose of whipping him. They rapped at his door for admittance, but Paul in some way had got wind of the proposed visit and had his two sons, a grother and brother-in-law in his home to assist him in protecting his life. On shattering the door the White Cappers found Paul and his body guard ready to defend themselves and a fusilade of shots followed. Paul was killed outright and four others were badly wounded. After the shooting the White Caps mounted their horses and rode off. Advices from New Road state that the sheriff and his deputies have arrested two white men as being implicated in the shooting.

LIVES ARE LOST.

Homes Destroyed and Crops Ruined in the Frazer River Country.

San Francisco, May 30.—The Examiner to-day has a special from Victoria, B. C., telling of appalling waste and destruction resulting from floods along the Frazer river and numerous tributaries. Many thousand acres of fruitful land are covered with water, on which floats the debris of ruined homes, costly dykes and expensive bridges. Hundreds of people are seeking shelter on rafts and on the highlands, and loss of life is reported. The flooded district embraces the most extensively cultivated region of the province extending fifty miles along the banks of the Frazer from New Westminster. It is stated that the great bridge of the Canadian Pacific at Revelstoke is gone, and another at Mission City. All crops are ruined.

Terrible War Machine.

Paris, May 30.—La Partie to-day announces that the notorious Turpin, the inventor whose name some time ago came prominently before the public in connection with the invention of the explosive known as melinite, and who was subsequently imprisoned, angered at the refusal of France to purchase his latest invention, has left the country and has sold to the powers composing the Dreibund, the secret of the manufacture of a terrible war machine. The latter is said to comprise a new explosive and a new projectile which, it is claimed, will completely transform the art of warfare and the conditions under which it is waged, rendering its possessors the masters of Europe. Turpin yielded to the personal urgings of a foreign sovereign and has received several million francs on account.

Kelly Is Pleased.

St. Louis, Mo., May 30.—Kelly's industrials were visited by at least 10,000 people at their camp to-day. Gen. Kelly spent the morning making his men comfortable for their stay here, which will be until Friday, when they will continue their journey to Washington via the Mississippi and Ohio rivers. The general is much pleased with the cordiality and liberality shown the army at St. Louis by St. Louisans. About 100 new members were recruited to-day.

Japanese Immigration.

Guatemala, May 30.—The government has been asked for a charter for a Japanese immigration society which wants exception from personal taxation for immigrants and officers of the society and the right to make private contracts introducing Japanese agricultural laborers for six years. The request is favorably regarded.

A Banquet to United States Naval Officers in London.

London, Special.—The banquet tendered to Admiral Erbon, Capt. Mahan and the officers of the United States cruiser Chicago by officers of the English navy and army and distinguished citizens of Great Britain was held last night in St. James hall. The principal table was placed upon a platform under the organ loft, from which hung immense English and American flags. Intertwined Union jacks and stars and stripes were placed in many parts of the hall. A broad band inscribed "Blood Is Thicker Than Water" was suspended from the gallery opposite the organ loft. Two British naval officers escorted each officer of the Chicago to his alloted seat. The officers wore uniforms. The other guests were in evening dress, but most of them wore order and sashes. Chaplain Shearman pronounced grace, both before and after the banquet. Lord George Hamilton offered a toast to the queen and President Cleveland. He said that Queen Victoria and President Cleveland were at the head of the two great English-speaking nationalities of the worldV, the heads of governments whose authority was exercised over a large portion of the globe and a still larger proportion of the human race paid them honor and respect. Many words of friendship were spoken during the evening.

Struck Gas in Colorado.

A FEMININE FENIAN.

"What! Another fenian!"

"Waal, I wouldn't go ez fur ez callin' her thet, James Francis. Of course, bein' a Methody, er Baptis', either hard er soft, kinder sots 'spicion on her in Otter Crik, but a fenian!" The worthy postmistress shook her head in charitable doubt. "I wouldn't prefer sich a ser'us charge. She's a pleasant spoken young critter an' not 'tall rev'looshanry lookin'."

"Kelly wuz a fenian," asserted a veteran farmer, deftly balancing a demijohn of molasses against the sundry contents of a huge bandanna handkerchief. "Pears ez ef this deestric' is jes' runnin' riot after sich firebrands."

Kelly was the late incumbent of Otter Creek, discharged by the selectmen on three counts; age, subscription to incendiary literature and indifference to arithmetical accuracy, as proved by his favorite formula, "If you come within three figgers of the answer you're nigh enough."

"She hes smilin' eyes," irrelevantly remarked an imprudent youth sorting out hand rakes in the corner.

"Hit a'ready, Abe," sneered the veteran. "Smilin' eyes be blowed! Fer a sarviceable schoolmarm give me a savage lookin' gal. Howdy s'pose this un 'ill rassle 'ith the mill gang?"

"I don't favor her persuasion," candidly admitted the stalwart James Francis, "but for all that I'm for giving her a fair trial, even though she does turn the hoss' head on the wrong road to meetin'."

"'Taint the hoss' head alone 'at 'll be turned the wrong way," scoffed the grumbler; "every durn young fool in Otter Crik is ready ter foller suit. Smilin' eyes, indeed! I don't b'lieve she kin figger through fraxions, an' fust chance I git I'm goin' ter stick her on the contents of them logs out'n the school yard. I don't b'lieve in wimmin teachers anyway; but ef the Crik can't hire a master for $75 a term an' board, why then it orter look out fer the homeliest lookin' female 'at could be hired fer money. Enythin' at all pass'ble makes fair idjits of you young fellers."

And grimly "hefting" his burden the veteran departed, followed by a respectful "cantanker'us, meddlin' old cuss!" from the enamored Abe.

"Here she comes now, a-caperin' down the hill with them Tucker children," remarked the postmistress, a pleasant smile lighting up her comely face. "It do beat all how a great growed gal, an' a schoolma'am at thet, kin frisk along ez giddy an' friv'lus ez eny of her scholars."

Quite unconscious of the interest she had excited, the young teacher came blithely down the hill, her own rapid step still further quickened by the impatient urging of her small charges, the little sailor hat tilted forward over a face pretty only in its youthful curves and happy, frank expression. The postmistress was quite right in deciding that there was nothing revolutionary in her appearance; Abe also was also correct in his opinion of her eyes, and James Francis, viewing her critically, became conscious of an alarming indifference to the manifold evils lurking in her persuasion. So impressed was he by the unfairness of his original remark that, after investing in chocolates for which he had no earthly use, he requested the genial Mrs. Forbes to observe silence on the subject, a favor readily granted and quite as cheerfully withdrawn under the irresistible temptations of a cozy tea, with the girl teacher as her guest.

Teaching in the country is the ordeal through which nearly every tyro must pass before being allowed to engage in city service. Though not the ideal pursuit painted by pen artists, it is the stepping-stone from which many an ambitious worldling hopes to climb to the heights of fame. In her unobtrusive way Cecelia Desmond was ambitious. She coveted a college course, and indulged roseate dreams of a future crowned with honors, won by personal effort. As a step in the right direction, when the Otter Creek vacancy offered she promptly packed her simple wardrobe and said good-by to the dear ones in her city home. It was the first separation, and the ache of parting throbbing in six hearts expressed itself in a copious shower of youthful tears, quickly dried, however, in a flash of fun as the strenuous efforts of the stage driver to lash the trunk to the tailboard resulted in the breaking of the rope, sending him sprawling in the roadway.

After a month's experience of the new life the young teacher was beginning to realize that fame asks much of its votaries. The routine of work was wretchedly monotonous, varied only by occasional skirmishes among the different sections of the district. The constituency of Otter Creek academy had many subtle subdivisions based on family feuds or political and religious variance. To unite so many elements in even seeming harmony, and at the same time impart sufficient instruction to satisfy the rather exacting community, was a task of gigantic proportions, and one which the girl in her home letters frequently asserted could be accomplished only by the united efforts of a statesman, a professor and a police officer. As comparison is a relief or a torture free to all, Cecelia fell into the habit of contrasting her fate with her surroundings, and thus became fully conscious that her lot was not as flowery as were the meadows stretching along the slope and tranquilly monopolizing the fertile interval.

From the meadows her thoughts reverted naturally to their owner, the fair-minded young farmer who had championed her cause even while condemning her belief. He was one of nature's noblemen, she admitted rather grudgingly, and censured herself severely for allowing her thoughts to dwell pleasurably on his masterful manner and vigorous, manly beauty. At such times, to atone for her mental vagaries, she locked herself in her sultry chamber, and, forcing her intellect to the contemplation of some abstruse problem, beguiled herself into the belief that she was fairly reveling in an intellectual Elysum.

Notwithstanding this severe, self-inflicted discipline, youth at times ran riot and urged Cecelia to the commission of many acts not at all compatible with the dignity of her position or her lofty intellectual pretensions. The orchards, berry patches and sweet smelling hay fields were responsible for many of her deviations from the college course, but that the handsome James Francis was also an active agent was fairly well known even before the veteran farmer made his next visit to the postoffice, and volunteered the information, "James Francis an' the fenian air gettin' kinder soc'ble; he's mowin' the long medder an' she's drivin' the machine. So sot on each other 'at they couldn't see me goin' by."

"She's a-drivin' James Francis ez waal ez the mower," laughed Mrs. Forbes. "You mark my words, Obediah, afore the snow blows the selectmen 'll hev the school on their hands. Shucks; the crossest grained old cormorant 'at ever lived 'ud jes' hev to smile seein' them young things go by. Lor', they don't know theirselves how far gone they are. It minds me of when Jabez an' me used ter come from meetin' ez if we wuz walkin' on air."

"You wuz fairly matched," snarled the malcontent, "but this un thinks herself a cut above farmer; talks of goin' ter collidge; pity she wuz ever hired ter the Crik. If they're still in the medder I'm goin' ter hail 'em on my way back an' say suthin' ez 'ill rile 'em."

"Trust you fer thet, you old crosspatch," muttered Abe, who seemed to be a permanent part of the general store; "it's pizen fer some folks to see others enjyin' theirselves.

"There you go, you blame old meescheef. I jes' hope ef you go meddlin' in the long medder you'l git yer legs twisted inter the mower an' cut off at the jints." And with this awful expression of his wrath Abe went to the door to watch the veteran's movements.

True to his intentions, Obadiah crossed the intervening fields, and, leaning on the fence inclosing the meadow, hollowed his hands into a trumpet, and bawled across:

"Hull-oo, James Francis! Help so scurse 'at you hev ter hire fenians?" Then without waiting for a reply ambled off, his shrill, crackling laugh adding to the annoyance of the haymakers.

"Don't you think you ought to apologize?" asked the girl, quickly regaining composure.

"For what?" He came round to the horses' heads, and from that vantage point looked steadily into the driver's eyes.

"For calling me a fenian; you were very unkind."

"I didn't mean to be," awkwardly; then humbly, "haven't I made up for it since?"

"But I was a stranger then," insisting on her injury. "That's why it hurt me so."

"I wouldn't hurt you for the world; you know that, Ceciliar."

The girl winced slightly; his pronunciation of her name was one of the little things that grated on her sensitive taste; but a superfluous letter or two lose force when the aggressor is is handsome and spirited. That he was both she acknowledged inwardly and was moved to forgiveness. The moment was fraught with peril for the college scheme. It was receding steadily into the distance; James Francis saw his advantage and meanly pursued it.

"This is as good a time as any to come to an understanding. When I called you a fenian I hadn't even seen you. I don't know that I even knew what a fenian meant. I don't know yet, but of this I am sure, whether you are a nilihist, a fenian or an anarchist, or all three together, I love you."

The horses tossed their heads impatiently, and the man passed his hand soothingly over their glossy coats.

"Let's cut another swath," suggested the girl, irreverently.

"Not another blade," he declared, "until I have my answer. Yes or no?"

"Well, since you will have it, No!"

"You don't mean it; say you don't Ceciliar," he pleaded, humbly yet hopefully.

"I do mean it," she asserted, passionately. "I never meant to settle down on a farm. I want to go through college and write A. B. to my name."

"Write Journee instead," he said, with telling insistence. "Give up the school and come home to the farm. Say yes, dear; you'll never regret it."

The fringe of elms, shading the brook rippled through the interval, caught the rays of the setting sun and cast them back again like javelins of light; the girl was dimly aware that evening was on the land. The air was heavy with the fragrance of new-mown hay; shimmering banks of clouds sank down behind the treetops; the chirping of crickets and the far-off croaking of frogs down in the alder swamp mingled with the lowing of cows and the soft trilling of birds seeking their nests, the holy calm of nature soothed even the unrest of a wavering heart, and hushed into silence the promptings of ambition.

"Everything living is going home," said the girl very gently; "let us go, too; see, the sun is nearly gone."

"I am only waiting for my answer," he reminded her.

"Do you know Frank, that you have asked me to renounce the hope of a lifetime? I have struggled so for a higher education." There was a wistful intonation in her voice that love interpreted correctly. She was pleading to be saved from her less noble self.

"We will seek it together," he answered; "dear heart, life has only begun."

Before the snow blew over the meadows Mrs. Forbes' prediction came to pass. The young teacher returned to her city home, but not for long.

"I never thought I could settle down on a farm, mamma," she whispered, during one of the long confidential talks preceding the final going away; "but Frank is—so—so—different."

The mother's face was beautiful, as stroking the sunny head buried in her lap she answered very softly, "A woman's heart is a vexatious thing, my darling; its depths hold many a secret; but," with a tenderly indulgent smile, love conquers all.—Mary B. O'Sullivan in Donohoe's Magazine.

SURPRISED THE ENGLISH VISITOR.

The Severe Criticisms Exchanged by Partisans at a Washington Banquet.

I. M. Weston, who is one of the chief pillars of the Michigan Democracy, though he originated in the Republican State of Maine, and who used to be mayor of Grand Rapids, and of late president of the Michigan board of world's fair managers, was chatting with his intimate friend, Private Secretary Thurber, the other evening at the Arlington, says the Washington Post. The conversation turned on the peculiarities of some specimens of the genus Briton who find their way to these shores and the difficulty they experience in getting at a correct understanding of our institutions.

"I shall never forget," said Mr. Weston, "a banquet that I attended at John Chamberlin's some time ago, which an Englishman of some note in his country graced by his presence. The force bill was up for discussion in congress at the time, and, of course, was a general topic of talk everywhere. The stranger, who sat next to me, seemed rather worried by the earnestness with which the dinner party debated the subject, and said to me in a confidential way: 'I can't understand why you Americans seem never to talk about anything but politics. We choose other matters at social gatherings in my country—art, letters, women, horses, anything except politics; and for the life of me I can't make out what it is that your rival parties are contending over.'

"It happened that in the course of the evening some speeches were called for, and among those who responded was Hallet Kilbourn, who delivered a glowing eulogium on the Republican party, reciting its origin, its great triumphs the deeds of its famous leaders, and lambasting the Democrats for a thousand sins. Others spoke in somewhat similar vein, until at last it was discovered that I was the only Democrat present, and nothing would do but that the solitary exponent of Democracy should lift his voice in defense of his assailed party. It was done with all the vigor at the command of the speaker, and entering into the spirit of the occasion, I branded the Republicans as the perpetrators of a long series of crimes against the people, stigmatized them as the party of the classes versus the masses, and all that sort of thing that is often heard in heated campaigns.

"Everybody, except the gentleman from London, took the speeches at their real worth. He listened as one entranced and understood them as meant seriously. When I took my seat beside him again he seemed wrapped in thought, and for several minutes said nothing. Presently he leaned over and whispered in my ear:

"'I am glad we don't have any such politics in England, for d—— me if our politicians were as rascally a lot as yours, they'd all get in prison.'"

ELECTRICAL WAGON.

It Is now in Operation on the Streets of London.

The latest development of electric traction is the new electric parcel and advertising van fer ordinary roads, now in use in London. By a careful arrangement the working parts are reduced to a minimum, leaving the whole of the interior of the body free for passenger or goods. The accumulators supplying the motive power are suspended in a special carrier beneath the body of the van, so that a recharged set may be substituted in two minutes without interfering with the contents of the van. The steering gear, which is of the greatest importance, is said to be satisfactory, the driver having perfect control of the vehicle. The van is also lighted by electricity, and is controlled by a single switch, giving six degrees of speed. An estimate shows that the cost of working a van by electricity, equal to a two-horse vehicle, including charging, maintenance, etc., is about 4 cents per mile. The car runs about thirty miles with each charge.—Philadelphia Record.

Husband—No, Mary; you can never accuse me of meanness. I paid $25 for that hat and $75 for that dress. I always like to see my wife well dressed.

Good Hunting.

A Detroit nimrod who went down to the Monroe marshes the other day for a little shooting, encountered a boy on a raft who was baited for crabs, and the nimrod tossed him a nickel and inquired:

"Boy, is there shooting around here?"

"Yaas."

"Seen any snipe?"

"Yaas."

"Will you put me on?"

"Yaas. If you go to shoot over this way you'll hit dad, who's after frogs, and dad is mean when anybody fires birdshot into him. If you shoot over there you'll pepper my brother Bill, who's got a line out after dog-fish. Bill allus raises a rumpus when he gits shot. Over that way is whar' ma is hunting for a lost calf, and if you pepper her dad will want $500 damages."

"But I can fire in all other directions, can I?"

"Yaas; but aim purty high, as the rest of the seven children is scattered around after roots or fish bait, and we have to drive three miles to reach a graveyard."—Detroit Free Press.

"Nothing to Speak of."

Broke.

The afternoon sun fell aslant of the street car and illuminated the ears of the off horse with an aureola of glory.

No one would call her pretty, and it is doubtful if she could command more than $3 a week at a soda-water fountain.

But her hair rippled back from a broad, low forehead, and that cuts quite a figure these days.

"Allow me to offer you my seat."

"Oh, thank you."

The youth stood a moment, dazed. Then he fled and walked the streets for four hours with quick, nervous tread.

"In justice to myself I must," he muttered.

With resolute face he proceeded to the home of his fiancee, whom he informed, briefly, that there was less of disparity between the ideal and the actual in woman than he had supposed, and would she kindly learn to forget him.

Hope Springs Eternal, Etc.

An old maid at least seventy years of age was helped into a chair in the office of a New York police justice. She was very much excited.

"Do I understand you to say that you think your pocket was picked by a young man who sat alongside of you in a Third avenue car?"

"Yes, I'm sure of it. He squeezed me up in the corner so that I could scarcely breathe, and he kept smiling at me, and smiling at me, as if he knew me."

"Why did you permit him to do that. Why did you not complain to the conductor?" asked the justice.

"I—I—"

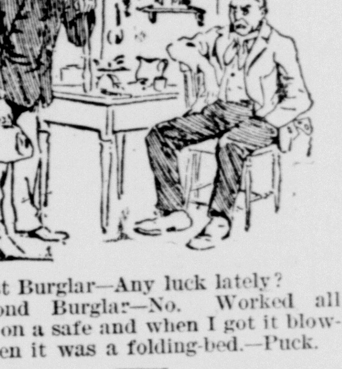

"Out with it."

"I thought perhaps he was—he was—"

"Was what?"

"Going to propose to me."

A Faithless Lot.

Fanny—I dreamt about you last night.

Jennie—What did you dream?

"I dreamt that the young man to whom you were engaged had gone back on you."

"I dare say it is so. You can't rely on young men nowadays. Only woman is faithful to her love. So you dreamt my would-be husband went back on me? I wonder whether it is Charlie? He was here night before last and I noticed that he was cold and distant. I think, perhaps, it was Dick; he always was a flirt. I have never trusted him. I wonder if Frank has had the meanness to jilt me for that lavender-haired girl he took to the theater? Ah, that's the way these men are. You can't rely on three or four young men, much less on one."

Maimed.

In the calm of evening the old man was driving home the cows.

His mind dwelt on other days. He saw the fresh, healthy face of his only son turned in farewell for a moment, then gone, perhaps forever.

"It was the call of duty," the father murmured. "It is not for me to repine."

"My boy, my boy."

He raised his eyes.

He was come again. A wan face instead of the glow of health, an empty sleeve, a crutch, but it was he.

"Yes," the youth explained, "I have my degree all right. I'm a trifle shy on legs and arms, but I'd like to call your attention to my hair. Ain't she a beaut?"

Drawing his diploma from his bosom, he showed that he spoke truly.

Concession.

The great man with white side whiskers setting off his red neck couldn't think of it.

"I'm very sorry," he repeated, "but $7 a week is all I can afford to pay you."

The youth with pallid features and a longing look, lingered at the threshold.

"May I—"

He turned yet again to plead.

"—refer to my remuneration as salary instead of wages without fear of contradiction by you?"

There was a long and painful silence, after which the youth crept away, and despair was written all over his face.

There.

"Fair, fair, with golden hair."

He took the second seat from the head of the table in a sort of trance

"Fair, fair, with golden hair."

The words of the song rang in his ears. His thoughts were far away. Men spoke to him, but he heard them not. Women told him it was a beautiful day, but the information fell upon deaf ears.

"Fair, fair, with golden hair."

They brought him food. He started violently and looked furtively about him.

"Fare, fare, with golden hair."

Yes, there it was, two strands of it in the Irish stew.

The Pinch.

Her eyes were red with weeping.

"Unkind fate," she moaned.

The man who was tearing his hair at the other side of the room acquiesced.

"But there is no alternative," he said, in a hollow voice. "Sign."

He pointed to the paper before her. With trembling hand she took the pen.

"We've got to mortgage the home," he continued, "or take less ice each morning, and we must keep up appearances."

With a quick, dry sob, she wrote her name.

On Olympus.

Clio was doing most of the talking

"I beg your pardon," suddenly interrupted Melpomene.

The muse of history was at no pains to conceal her irritation.

"You wouldn't say that," she exclaimed petulantly, "if it wasn't that I have the reputation of sepeating myself."

Terpsichore, who was practicing a new form of the York, laughed softly to herself.

Lame.

Her lashes drooped upon her suffused cheek.

"Are you prepared?" he demanded, in low, thrilling tones, "to stand before the world and declare your love for me?"

She gasped.

"No, no," she faltered, "not yet."

"Why, darling?"

Her head sank upon his shoulder.

"My vaccination took," she whispered.

Marriage in High Life.

There are people in New York who toady after the rich. The following conversation took place in a Third avenue street car:

"So your sister is married?"

"Yes, and she did very well—splendid. You have heard of Vanderbilt?"

"Oh, yes. Did she marry into that family?"

"Well, yes, so to speak. She married a nephew of Vanderbilt's chief cook. He is the driver of a street car."

Indifferent.

"Do you approve of early marriages?"

The vision in the hammock paused a moment ere replying.

"Yes," she murmured at last, "I can say that I do. A woman can dress the same in the afternoon as in the evening these days."

In the falling shadows she looked strangely beautiful.

Forewarned.

They were personal enemies.

"Sir," exclaimed the leading lady, as they stood together at the front of the stage, while the gallery held its breath, "I defy you to do your worst."

"Ha," said the villain aside, "she must know of eggs in the audience."

Turning then, he shouted aloud, and triumphantly:

"Never!"

Worry and Indigestion.

Worry is a baneful curse and source of untold evils. It seams the face with lines and furrows and has a most depressing effect upon that hyper-sensitive organ, the stomach, which at such times becomes a most unwilling and laggard servant. Indeed, it is safe to say unless encouraged by a cheerful temper and bright, or at least hopeful, thoughts, the stomach will play truant or sulk and do no work which it can shrink. The physiological explanation of this is the close alliance of the great sympathetic nerves, which are worse than the telegraph for carrying bad news; the worry and anxiety which depress the brain produce simultaneously a semi-paralysis of the nerves of the stomach, gastric juices will not flow and—presto! there is indigestion. One sign of mental health is serenity of temper and a self-control that enables us to bear with equanimity and unruffled temper the petty trials and jars of life, especially those arising from contact with scolding, irascible, irritating folk. It is well to remember at such times that these unfortunates are their own worst enemies, and a cultivation of the art of not hearing will help us very much. It is a very useful art all through life and well worth some trouble to acquire.—Demorest's Magazine.

The Doll of Colored Children.

Did any one ever see little colored girls playing with any other sort of dolls than white ones? Perhaps such little girls sometimes have black dolls, but the writer often sees them at their doll play in a street which is almost exclusively inhabited by colored people, and has never seen them with any but white dolls. Generally the dolls are quite blonde. It is not for want of black dolls in the stores; they are numerous enough, and are much favored by white girls. The reason for it is of course, a very pathetic story—the long story of a race enslaved and despised until it has to a great extent lost its pride in itself and come to court another by a habit which is second nature. The mulattoes and quadroons are given a certain precedence and honor by the blacks, and the little mulatto girls will have none but white dolls, and blondes at that!—Boston Transcript.

An Indian Trader tells his story of Kickapoo Indian Sagwa.

Cured of a Distressing Stomach Difficulty.

RUSHVILLE, NEB., June. 5

Some time ago after suffering severely with stomach trouble and dyspepsia, which had been greatly aggravated by the alkali water of the western country, and when I had reached that stage where I could frequently hold nothing on my stomach, and would even throw up water as soon as drank, I learned from a Sioux Indian, who had been on a visit to the Kickapoo tribe, of a wonderful remedy called "Sagwa." I got him to procure some for me. The effect was remarkable. I tried to get more from the Indian, but he would not let me have more of his. He prized it so much he would not give it up. I then learned that Healy & Bigelow, of New Haven, Conn., had an arrangement with the Kickapoo tribe, and was putting their remedies on the market. I sent and got a bottle of the Kickapoo Indian Sagwa, and found it to be the same as that I had procured from the Sioux Indian. I got more, and after the use of a few bottles, I was not only relieved but entirely cured, and have stayed cured ever since.

I can eat anything set before me. Salt bacon, which used to have a most distressing effect, I can now eat and relish like an Indian.

I cannot speak too highly of the Kickapoo remedies, and cheerfully recommend them to anyone.

Immense schools of weakfish have made their appearance off Anglesea. Catches of 100 fish to a man are common. The fish run from one to two pounds in weight.

One of the oldest tunes in the world is said to be the air sung to the words "We won't go home till morning." It is known to date back to the time of the Crusaders.

It would appear from a London cablegram that it's "Scotland to the rescue." Several Scotch coal owners have shipped a number of steamer loads of coal to New York in consequence of the coal strikers in the United States.

The London paper the African Review devoted to the interests of the dark continent, will be edited by the author of "She." If vivid imagination is the chief talent sought, Mr. Haggard has the requirements.

Mrs. Lease lies in a hotel at Olathe, Kas., seriously ill from nervous prostration because of a persistent crank who follows her and threatens her life. Lock the fellow up. The country cannot afford to lose its most distinctive political figure.

Anna Gould's engagement to Harriman has been been broken off and Howard denies his alliance. It is hard to believe that those young people, apparently so blessed with everything that mortal heart can desire, are practicing for the stage, but it looks that way.

The resignation of the French ministry following its defeat on what appears to be a question of small importance, is indicative of the very slender tenure on which it has held office. There are so many factions in the French chamber of deputies that it is difficult to form a ministry which can command a majority on all the numerous issues which come up in that body.

Base ball has broken out with great severity among the Indians on the Western plains. It is a little singular that the noble red man always adopts the vices, but not the virtues of his white brother. He takes to the smallpox and whisky bottle as naturally as a duck takes to water, and it now seems probable that the race decimation will be completed by indulgence in the base ball mania.

The storm of last week did all kinds of mischief on the lakes and in Chicago. One of its unkind deeds was the destruction of the famous old cottonwood tree that stood on the site of the Dearborn massacre. The remains have been pretty thoroughly appropriated already for souvenir purposes by people who appreciate what a place the veteran had in the history and traditions of Chicago.

Keep Them Growing.

Your domestic animals of all kinds must be kept in prime healthy growing condition in order to make profitable ones. Any animal which is stunted in its early youth will fail to make as good an ultimate development as it would have done otherwise, no matter how much you may pamper it in after life, and whatever is accomplished later on is done at far greater cost than would have been the case if it had been given a fair start. It is just the same with growing stock as with growing a crop—you cannot by subsequent cultivation make amends for neglecting the initial preparation.

It should be understood that good feeding and over-feeding are not the same things. Good feeding consists in supplying such amount and quality as can be easily digested and assimilated, and neither more nor less. It is only such food which at all benefits an animal. Excessive feeding decreases the power of assimilation, as an overloaded stomach cannot properly do the work which nature intended it should. In order to determine the line between good feeding and over-feeding the personal traits of each animal should be studied. Economy and correct methods of feeding can only be reached when you feed individually.

The method of feeding stock should vary, according to the end you wish to serve. One ration may be best for growth, another for fattening, and still another for milk and butter. To decide between these you should know something of the nutritive values of different foods and to combine them to the best effect. If you do not, you cannot procure the fullest possible profit from your work.—Exchange.

The Characters in "Marcella."

As might have been expected, continues the same entertaining gossip, the infallible ones among us have set themselves to work to identify the characters in Mrs. Ward's new novel, "Marcella." It was not, however, a matter of great difficulty to find the "Fabian" in the "Venturist Society," or the Labor Collector in the "Labor Clarion," but those only who are well behind the scenes will be able to pick out Messrs. William Morris, Walter Crane, Keir Hardie and Champion. Marcella, herself, is said to be a judicious amalgam of Lady Carlisle and Miss Margaret Harkness, so much at the time beloved of the "Dockers." Mr. Arthur Balfour is supposed to figure in the novel in the disguise of Aldous Raeburn. It is decidedly a relief to turn from the "neurotic" women who have had recently such a very long inning to the girl whose mistakes are the result of noble, but misdirected "enthusiasm for humanity." Marcella does not clamor for more worlds (of men) to conquer! She aims, not always wisely, but with the zeal of an ardent crusader, at the regeneration of the world.—Ladies' Pictorial.

An English May Day.

Baroness Burdette-Coutts clasped the gold chain and cross that Mr. Ruskin annually gives to the "May Queen" at Whitelands College, Chelsea, round the neck of Miss Emma Hands, the young lady elected to that pretty distinction by her fellow-students. The May Day observances began with a festal service in the college chapel, which was beautifully decorated with spring flowers; and after last year's "Queen Dowager" had gracefully abdicated, and a chaplet of apple blossoms had been placed on the head of the newly found sovereign, an intricate May-pole dance was performed in the great hall while the "Queen" retired to assume her regal robes. Baroness Burdett-Coutts said that she hoped the day would be a pleasantly memorable one in all their young lives, and that the winner of Mr. Ruskin's beautiful gift would find it one of her greatest pleasures in the future to bring to other minds and homes some of the lessons of love and gentleness to be found in his works.—London Telegraph.

What He Would Say to His Wife

Robinson—It's awfully late, Brown. What will you say to your wife?

Brown (in a whisper)—Oh, I shan't say much, you know. "Good morning, dear," or something of that sort. She'll say the rest.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Policeman—You must not walk on the grass.

Stranger—There are some sheep over there walking on it.

HONOR SOLDIER DEAD

DECORATION DAY OBSERVED THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.

Washington Cemeteries Visited by Immense Throngs—Beautiful Floral Tributes Left at the Tombs of Lincoln and Grant.

Washington, May 30.—Decoration day was observed here here even more generally than heretofore. All the government buildings were closed most of the day and business throughout the city was generally suspended. The various cemeteries were visited by throngs, especially Arlington, where rest so many illustrious dead.

New York, May 30.—The usual Decoration day ceremonies were held in this city. As usual, since the death of Gen. Grant, Riverside Park was the center of attraction, and an immense number of floral tributes were left at the tomb of the dead soldier.

Springfield, Ill., May 30. — Oakridge cemetery, in which stands the monument erected to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, and where the remains of the martyr president lie, was visited to-day by thousands of people, and many beautiful floral tributes were placed in the tomb. Special services were held at the base of the monument during the afternoon.

St. Paul, May 30.—Decoration day was celebrated generally throughout the Northwest. In St. Paul and Minneapolis special services were held in many churches and at the various cemeteries.

SWEPT BY FLOODS.

Enormous Loss of Life and Property From the Bursting of a Dam.

Calcutta, May 30.—In addition to the loss of 200 lives by the bursting of a dam, formed by a land-slip in Charkkupria, Kulu, and the destruction of live stock and dwellings which accompanied it, disastrous floods have wrought much damage in North Cachar. The Jetinga has overflowed its banks and has inundated an area of hundreds of miles. The result of this inundation has been a tremendous loss of property, and in addition the loss of life is believed to be enormous. Whole villages have been destroyed in a number of sections of the flood-visited country. The flood is pronounced to be the most severe in many years. The water swept onward like a forty-foot wall, sweeping away several villages, among them one having eighty houses.

BALLOT FRAUDS CONFESSED.

Sutherland Tells of Fictitious Votes Cast at the November Election.

New York, May 30.—When Kenneth Sutherland, companion of John Y. McKane in Gravesend election frauds, was brought into court for sentence, a written confession by the prisoner was read. In it he said that of his own knowledge between 800 and 900 fictitious votes were cast out of a total of 1,512 in the Second district alone, and that the whole number of fictitious votes cast at the November election in Gravesend was about 1,500. "I folded with my own hands two lots of paper ballots, each 100 or 200 in number, which were fictitiously cast in my presence on that day." In 1892, according to Sutherland, out of a total of 2,000 votes cast 1,200 were fictitious. He refused to inculpate others in his confession.

Perrin Dying.

New London, Wis., May 30.—Phelps Perrin, recently pardoned after serving nearly five years for the theft of $40,000 from the Iron Exchange bank at Hurley, is dying. He has been unconscious for nearly thirty-six hours and can live but a short time. Perrin is at his mother's home here. He has made no confession, and, as the money stolen from the Hurley bank was buried by Perrin after he and Baker separated after the deed, it is believed the money will be lost. Baker, it is said, does not know where the money is concealed.

Prospective Lynching.

Omaha, May 30.—A Lexington, Neb., special to the Bee says: A mob is now organized here to take from jail Ben Hilton and William Thompson, charged with raping a sixteen-year-old girl and lynch them. The mob banished Rufus Gun and Sam Robert, giving them three minutes to leave town or be tarred and feathered. There are three murderers confined in the jail.

Ramsey Defeated.

Denver, May 30.—The railway telegraphers' election to-day resulted in defeat for Grand Chief Telegrapher Ramsey, his successor being Walter V. Powell of Wichita, Kan. The vote stood 59 to 56. The telegraphers indorsed the action of Grand Chief Ramsey in suspending the Omaha charter, and expressed a willingness to restore the charter if the Omaha division would obey Ramsey's former orders. F. E. Gilliland promised it would be done.

The Countess Unworthy.

London, May 30. — Countess Russell has asked the courts for leave to petition for a restoration of conjugal rites with her husband, Earl Russell. The latter pleads that the petitioner has been guilty of cruelty in alleging a disgraceful offense against him, and that, therefore, she is not entitled to her restoration of conjugal rights. Leave, however, was granted the countess to make the petition as requested.

Prof. Dowe Is Safe.

Chicago, May 30.—The police were to-day notified by the friends of Prof. John Dowe, of the South Dakota university, that they had learned that he was now on the ocean, bound for Scotland. For several days the professor's friends have been concerned about him, as he left a large amount of personal baggage in Chicago, and it was feared he had met with some mishap.

A Spencer, Iowa, Girl and Her Most Remarkable Marriage.

Spencer Iowa, Special.—The marriage of Miss Etta Tracy of Spencer to Dr. Woodcock of New York was consummated yesterday. The contracting parties first met at Arnold's Park, where the young lady was employed as a dining room girl, and 'tis said the groom was first attracted by the kindness of the girl who, when he was helpless, was so accommodating as to lace his shoes, which favor the other girls had refused, though he pleaded his inability to perform this service for himself, owing to lumbar rheumatism. The infatuated gentleman proposed marriage, and in order to fit her for the position of wife, placed her in a good school, he taking up his residence near. This spring the romantic courtship was terminated in the most happy manner, and the loving pair will spend some time wandering among the wonders of the old world, when, it is said, they propose to return and make Spencer their home.

Indian Affairs.

Washington Special.—The senate committee on Indian affairs authorized a favorable report on the bill providing for the opening of the Untah and Uncompagre Indian reservations in Utah. The bill provides for the allotment of a portion of the land of the reservations in severalty to the Indians, and the opening of that remaining to settlement. The committee also ordered favorably reported an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill introduced by Senator Pettigrew for the ratification of the treaty with the Yankton Sioux Indians.

Bourgeois Decline.

New York, Special—The Herald's dispatch from Paris says: M. Bourgeois has declined to accept the responsibility of forming a ministry, and no one else has thus far been selected for the task. It will not be astonishing, however, if M. Boulanger, the present minister of colonies, should play an important role in the next ministerial combination.

WHITE CAP OUTRAGE.

One Man Killed and Four Others Wounded.

New Orleans, May 30.—The town of New Road, the seat of justice of Pointe Coupee parish, was the scene the other night of a serious White Cap outrage, full particulars of which are not yet known because of the isolation of the town. George Paul, an aged negro, offended one of the White Caps. A party of the latter called at the negro's house for the purpose of whipping him. They rapped at his door for admittance, but Paul in some way had got wind of the proposed visit and had his two sons, a brother and brother-in-law in his home to assist him in protecting his life. On shattering the door the White Cappers found Paul and his body guard ready to defend themselves and a fusilade of shots followed. Paul was killed outright and four others were badly wounded. After the shooting the White Caps mounted their horses and rode off. Advices from New Road state that the sheriff and his deputies have arrested two white men as being implicated in the shooting.

LIVES ARE LOST.

Homes Destroyed and Crops Ruined in the Frazer River Country.

San Francisco, May 30.—The Examiner to-day has a special from Victoria, B. C., telling of appalling waste and destruction resulting from floods along the Frazer river and numerous tributaries. Many thousand acres of fruitful land are covered with water, on which floats the debris of ruined homes, costly dykes and expensive bridges. Hundreds of people are seeking shelter on rafts and on the highlands, and loss of life is reported. The flooded district embraces the most extensively cultivated region of the province extending fifty miles along the barks of the Frazer from New Westminster. It is stated that the great bridge of the Canadian Pacific at Revelstoke is gone, and another at Mission City. All crops are ruined.

Terrible War Machine.

Paris, May 30.—La Partie to-day announces that the notorious Turpin, the inventor whose name some time ago came prominently before the public in connection with the invention of the explosive known as melinite, and who was subsequently imprisoned, angered at the refusal of France to purchase his latest invention, has left the country and has sold to the powers composing the Dreibund, the secret of the manufacture of a terrible war machine. The latter is said to comprise a new explosive and a new projectile which, it is claimed, will completely transform the art of warfare and the conditions under which it is waged, rendering its possessors the masters of Europe. Turpin yielded to the personal urgings of a foreign sovereign and has received several million francs on account.

Kelly Is Pleased.

St. Louis, Mo., May 30.—Kelly's industrials were visited by at least 10,000 people at their camp to-day. Gen. Kelly spent the morning making his men comfortable for their stay here, which will be until Friday, when they will continue their journey to Washington via the Mississippi and Ohio rivers. The general is much pleased with the cordiality and liberality shown the army at St. Louis by St. Louisans. About 100 new members were recruited to-day.

A Banquet to United States Naval Officers in London.

London, Special.—The banquet tendered to Admiral Erben, Capt. Mahan and the officers of the United States cruiser Chicago by officers of the English navy and army and distinguished citizens of Great Britain was held last night in St. James hall. The principal table was placed upon a platform under the organ loft, from which hung immense English and American flags. Intertwined Union jacks and stars and stripes were placed in many parts of the hall. A broad band inscribed "Blood Is Thicker Than Water" was suspended from the gallery opposite the organ loft. Two British naval officers escorted each officer of the Chicago to his alloted seat. The officers wore uniforms. The other guests were in evening dress, but most of them wore order and sashes. Chaplain Shearman pronounced grace, both before and after the banquet. Lord George Hamilton offered a toast to the queen and President Cleveland. He said that Queen Victoria and President Cleveland were at the head of the two great English-speaking nationalities of the world, the heads of governments whose authority was exercised over a large portion of the globe and a still larger proportion of the human race paid them honor and respect. Many words of friendship were spoken during the evening.

A FEMININE FENIAN.

"What! Another fenian!"

"Waal, I wouldn't go ez fur ez callin' her thet, James Francis. Of course, bein' a Methody, er Baptis', either hard er soft, kinder sots 'spicion on her in Otter Crik, but a fenian!" The worthy postmistress shook her head in charitable doubt. "I wouldn't prefer sich a ser'us charge. She's a pleasant spoken young critter an' not 'tall rev'looshanry lookin'."

"Kelly wuz a fenian," asserted a veteran farmer, deftly balancing a demijohn of molasses against the sundry contents of a huge bandanna handkerchief. "Pears ez ef this deestric' is jes' runnin' riot after sich firebrands."

Kelly was the late incumbent of Otter Creek, discharged by the selectmen on three counts; age, subscription to incendiary literature and indifference to arithmetical accuracy, as proved by his favorite formula, "If you come within three figgers of the answer you're nigh enough."

"She hes smilin' eyes," irrelevantly remarked an imprudent youth sorting out hand rakes in the corner.

"Hit a'ready, Abe," sneered the veteran. "Smilin' eyes be blowed! Fer a sarviceable schoolmarm give me a savage lookin' gal. Howdy s'pose this un 'ill rassle 'ith the mill gang?"

"I don't favor her persuasion," candidly admitted the stalwart James Francis, "but for all that I'm for giving her a fair trial, even though she does turn the hoss' head on the wrong road to meetin'."

"'Taint the hoss' head alone 'at 'll be turned the wrong way," scoffed the grumbler; "every durn young fool in Otter Crik is ready ter foller suit. Smilin' eyes, indeed! I don't b'lieve she kin figger through fraxions, an' fust chance I git I'm goin' ter stick her on the contents of them logs out'n the school yard. I don't b'lieve in wimmin teachers anyway; but ef the Crik can't hire a master for $75 a term an' board, why then it orter look out fer the homeliest lookin' female 'at could be hired fer money. Enythin' at all pass'ble makes fair idjits of you young fellers."

And grimly "hefting" his burden the veteran departed, followed by a respectful "cantanker'us, meddlin' old cuss!" from the enamored Abe.

"Here she comes now, a-caperin' down the hill with them Tucker children," remarked the postmistress, a pleasant smile lighting up her comely face. "It do beat all how a great growed gal, an' a schoolma'am at thet, kin frisk along ez giddy an' friv'lus ez eny of her scholars."

Quite unconscious of the interest she had excited, the young teacher came blithely down the hill, her own rapid step still further quickened by the impatient urging of her small charges, the little sailor hat tilted forward over a face pretty only in its youthful curves and happy, frank expression. The postmistress was quite right in deciding that there was nothing revolutionary in her appearance; Abe also was also correct in his opinion of her eyes, and James Francis, viewing her critically, became conscious of an alarming indifference to the manifold evils lurking in her persuasion. So impressed was he by the unfairness of his original remark that, after investing in chocolates for which he had no earthly use, he requested the genial Mrs. Forbes to observe silence on the subject, a favor readily granted and quite as cheerfully withdrawn under the irresistible temptations of a cozy tea, with the girl teacher as her guest.

Teaching in the country is the ordeal through which nearly every tyro must pass before being allowed to engage in city service. Though not the ideal pursuit painted by pen artists, it is the stepping-stone from which many an ambitious worldling hopes to climb to the heights of fame. In her unobtrusive way Cecelia Desmond was ambitious. She coveted a college course, and indulged roseate dreams of a future crowned with honors, won by personal effort. As a step in the right direction, when the Otter Creek vacancy offered she promptly packed her simple wardrobe and said good-by to the dear ones in her city home. It was the first separation, and the ache of parting throbbing in six hearts expressed itself in a copious shower of youthful tears, quickly dried, however, in a flash of fun as the strenuous efforts of the stage driver to lash the trunk to the tailboard resulted in the breaking of the rope, sending him sprawling in the roadway.

After a month's experience of the new life the young teacher was beginning to realize that fame asks much of its votaries. The routine of work was wretchedly monotonous, varied only by occasional skirmishes among the different sections of the district. The constituency of Otter Creek academy had many subtle subdivisions based on family feuds or political and religious variance. To unite so many elements in even seeming harmony, and at the same time impart sufficient instruction to satisfy the rather exacting community, was a task of gigantic proportions, and one which the girl in her home letters frequently asserted could be accomplished only by the united efforts of a statesman, a professor and a police officer. As comparison is a relief or a torture free to all, Cecelia fell into the habit of contrasting her fate with her surroundings, and thus became fully conscious that her lot was not as flowery as were the meadows stretching along the slope and tranquilly monopolizing the fertile interval.

From the meadows her thoughts reverted naturally to their owner, the fair-minded young farmer who had championed her cause even while condemning her belief. He was one of nature's noblemen, she admitted rather grudgingly, and censured herself severely for allowing her thoughts to dwell pleasurably on his masterful manner and vigorous, manly beauty. At such times, to atone for her mental vagaries, she locked herself in her sultry chamber, and, forcing her intellect to the contemplation of some abstruse problem, beguiled herself into the belief that she was fairly reveling in an intellectual Elysum.

Notwithstanding this severe, self-inflicted discipline, youth at times ran riot and urged Cecelia to the commission of many acts not at all compatible with the dignity of her position or her lofty intellectual pretensions. The orchards, berry patches and sweet smelling hay fields were responsible for many of her deviations from the college course, but that the handsome James Francis was also an active agent was fairly well known even before the veteran farmer made his next visit to the postoffice, and volunteered the information, "James Francis an' the fenian air gettin' kinder soc'ble; he's mowin' the long medder an' she's drivin' the machine. So sot on each other 'at they couldn't see me goin' by."

"She's a-drivin' James Francis ez waal ez the mower," laughed Mrs. Forbes. "You mark my words, Obediah, afore the snow blows the selectmen 'll hev the school on their hands. Shucks; the crossest grained old cormorant 'at ever lived 'ud jes' hev to smile seein' them young things go by. Lor', they don't know theirselves how far gone they are. It minds me of when Jabez an' me used ter come from meetin' ez if we wuz walkin' on air."

"You wuz fairly matched," snarled the malcontent, "but this un thinks herself a cut above farmer; talks of goin' ter collidge; pity she wuz ever hired ter the Crik. If they're still in the medder I'm goin' ter hail 'em on my way back an' say suthin' ez 'ill rile 'em."

"Trust you fer thet, you old crosspatch," muttered Abe, who seemed to be a permanent part of the general store; "it's pizen fer some folks to see others enjyin' theirselves."

"There you go, you blame old meeschef. I jes' hope ef you go meddlin' in the long medder you'll git yer legs twisted inter the mower an' cut off at the jints." And with this awful expression of his wrath Abe went to the door to watch the veteran's movements.

True to his intentions, Obadiah crossed the intervening fields, and, leaning on the fence inclosing the meadow, hollowed his hands into a trumpet, and bawled across:

"Hull-oo, James Francis! Help' so scurse 'at you hev ter hire fenians?" Then without waiting for a reply ambled off, his shrill, crackling laugh adding to the annoyance of the haymakers.

"Don't you think you ought to apologize?" asked the girl, quickly regaining composure.

"For what?" He came round to the horses' heads, and from that vantage point looked steadily into the driver's eyes.

"For calling me a fenian; you were very unkind."

"I didn't mean to be," awkwardly; then humbly, "haven't I made up for it since?"

"But I was a stranger then," insisting on her injury. "That's why it hurt me so."

"I wouldn't hurt you for the world; you know that, Ceciliar."

The girl winced slightly; his pronunciation of her name was one of the little things that grated on her sensitive taste; but a superfluous letter or two lose force when the aggressor is handsome and spirited. That he was both she acknowledged inwardly and was moved to forgiveness. The moment was fraught with peril for the college scheme. It was receding steadily into the distance; James Francis saw his advantage and manly pursued it.

"This is as good a time as any to come to an understanding. When I called you a fenian I hadn't even seen you. I don't know that I even knew what a fenian meant. I don't know yet, but of this I am sure, whether you are a nilihist, a fenian or an anarchist, or all three together, I love you."

The horses tossed their heads impatiently, and the man passed his hand soothingly over their glossy coats.

"Let's cut another swath," suggested the girl, irreverently.

"Not another blade," he declared, "until I have my answer. Yes or no?"

"Well, since you will have it, No!"

"You don't mean it; say you don't Ceciliar," he pleaded, humbly yet hopefully.

"I do mean it," she asserted, passionately. "I never meant to settle down on a farm. I want to go through college and write A. B. to my name."

"Write Journee instead," he said, with telling insistence. "Give up the school and come home to the farm. Say yes, dear; you'll never regret it."

The fringe of elms, shading the brook rippled through the interval, caught the rays of the setting sun and cast them back again like javelins of light; the girl was dimly aware that evening was on the land. The air was heavy with the fragrance of new-mown hay; shimmering banks of clouds sank down behind the treetops; the chirping of crickets and the far-off croaking of frogs down in the alder swamp mingled with the lowing of cows and the soft trilling of birds seeking their nests, the holy calm of nature soothed even the unrest of a wavering heart, and hushed into silence the promptings of ambition.

"Everything living is going home," said the girl very gently; "let us go, too; see, the sun is nearly gone."

"I am only waiting for my answer," he reminded her.

"Do you know Frank, that you have asked me to renounce the hope of a lifetime? I have struggled so for a higher education." There was a wistful intonation in her voice that love interpreted correctly. She was pleading to be saved from her less noble self.

"We will seek it together," he answered; "dear heart, life has only begun."

Before the snow blew over the meadows Mrs. Forbes' prediction came to pass. The young teacher returned to her city home, but not for long.

"I never thought I could settle down on a farm, mamma," she whispered, during one of the long confidential talks preceding the final going away; "but Frank is—so—so—different."

The mother's face was beautiful, as stroking the sunny head buried in her lap she answered very softly, "A woman's heart is a vexatious thing, my darling; its depths hold many a secret; but," with a tenderly indulgent smile, love conquers all.—Mary B. O'Sullivan in Donohoe's Magazine.

SURPRISED THE ENGLISH VISITOR.

The Severe Criticisms Exchanged by Partisans at a Washington Banquet.

I. M. Weston, who is one of the chief pillars of the Michigan Democracy, though he originated in the Republican State of Maine, and who used to be mayor of Grand Rapids, and of late president of the Michigan board of world's fair managers, was chatting with his intimate friend, Private Secretary Thurber, the other evening at the Arlington, says the Washington Post. The conversation turned on the peculiarities of some specimens of the genus Briton who find their way to these shores and the difficulty they experience in getting at a correct understanding of our institutions.

"I shall never forget," said Mr. Weston, "a banquet that I attended at John Chamberlin's some time ago, in which an Englishman of some note in his country graced by his presence. The force bill was up for discussion in congress at the time, and, of course, was a general topic of talk everywhere. The stranger, who sat next to me, seemed rather worried by the earnestness with which the dinner party debated the subject, and said to me in a confidential way: 'I can't understand why you Americans seem never to talk about anything but politics. We choose other matters at social gatherings in my country—art, letters, women, horses, anything except politics; and for the life of me I can't make out what it is that your rival parties are contending over.'

"It happened that in the course of the evening some speeches were called for, and among those who responded was Hallet Kilbourn, who delivered a glowing eulogium on the Republican party, reciting its origin, its great triumphs the deeds of its famous leaders, and lambasting the Democrats for a thousand sins. Others spoke in somewhat similar vein, until at last it was discovered that I was the only Democrat present, and nothing would do but that the solitary exponent of Democracy should lift his voice in defense of his assailed party. It was done with all the vigor at the command of the speaker, and entering into the spirit of the occasion, I branded the Republicans as the perpetrators of a long series of crimes against the people, stigmatized them as the party of the classes versus the masses, and all that sort of thing that is often heard in heated campaigns.

"Everybody, except the gentleman from London, took the speeches at their real worth. He listened as one entranced and understood them as meant seriously. When I took my seat beside him again he seemed wrapped in thought, and for several minutes said nothing. Presently he leaned over and whispered in my ear:

"'I am glad we don't have any such politics in England, for d—— me if our politicians were as rascally a lot as yours, they'd all get in prison.'"

ELECTRICAL WAGON.

It Is now in Operation on the Streets of London.

The latest development of electric traction is the new electric parcel and advertising van for ordinary roads, now in use in London. By a careful arrangement the working parts are reduced to a minimum, leaving the whole of the interior of the body free for passenger or goods. The accumulators supplying the motive power are suspended in a special carrier beneath the body of the van, so that a recharged set may be substituted in two minutes without interfering with the contents of the van. The steering gear, which is of the greatest importance, is said to be satisfactory, the driver having perfect control of the vehicle. The van is also lighted by electricity, and is controlled by a single switch, giving six degrees of speed. An estimate shows that the cost of working a van by electricity, equal to a two-horse vehicle, including charging, maintenance, etc., is about 4 cents per mile. The car runs about thirty miles with each charge.—Philadelphia Record.

A Similar Feeling.

Husband—No, Mary; you can never accuse me of meanness. I paid $25 for that hat and $75 for that dress. I always like to see my wife well dressed.

Wife (kindly)—And I like to see you look well, too, Henry. Give me that hat, and I'll touch up those rusty spots with this shoe blacking.—Puck.

WHAT THE WITS SAY.

BRIGHT PRODUCTIONS OF THE HUMORISTS.

Amusing Incidents and Witty Sayings—A Good Digestion for a Hearty Meal—The Best of the Current Humor as Gleaned from the Humorous Papers.

Good Hunting.

A Detroit nimrod who went down to the Monroe marshes the other day for a little shooting, encountered a boy on a raft who was baited for crabs, and the nimrod tossed him a nickel and inquired:

"Boy, is there shooting around here?"

"Yaas."

"Seen any snipe?"

"Yaas."

"Will you put me on?"

"Yaas. If you go to shoot over this way you'll hit dad, who's after frogs, and dad is mean when anybody fires birdshot into him. If you shoot over there you'll pepper my brother Bill, who's got a line out after dog-fish. Bill allus raises a rumpus when he gits shot. Over that way is whar' ma is hunting for a lost calf, and if you pepper her dad will want $500 damages."

"But I can fire in all other directions, can I?"

"Yaas; but aim purty high, as the rest of the seven children is scattered around after roots or fish bait, and we have to drive three miles to reach a graveyard."—Detroit Free Press.

"Nothing to Speak of."

Broke.

The afternoon sun fell aslant of the street car and illuminated the ears of the off horse with an aureola of glory.

No one would call her pretty, and it is doubtful if she could command more than $3 a week at a soda-water fountain.

But her hair rippled back from a broad, low forehead, and that cuts quite a figure these days.

"Allow me to offer you my seat."

"Oh, thank you."

The youth stood a moment, dazed. Then he fled and walked the streets for four hours with quick, nervous tread.

"In justice to myself I must," he muttered.

With resolute face he proceeded to the home of his fiancee, whom he informed, briefly, that there was less of disparity between the ideal and the actual in woman than he had supposed, and would she kindly learn to forget him.

Hope Springs Eternal, Etc.

An old maid at least seventy years of age was helped into a chair in the office of a New York police justice. She was very much excited.

"Do I understand you to say that you think your pocket was picked by a young man who sat alongside of you in a Third avenue car?"

"Yes, I'm sure of it. He squeezed me up in the corner so that I could scarcely breathe, and he kept smiling at me, and smiling at me, as if he knew me."

"Why did you permit him to do that. Why did you not complain to the conductor?" asked the justice.

"I—I—"

"Out with it."

"I thought perhaps he was—he—was—"

"Was what?"

"Going to propose to me."

Hard Luck.

First Burglar—Any luck lately?

Second Burglar—No. Worked all night on a safe and when I got it blowed open it was a folding-bed.—Puck.

Will Be a Respected Citizen.

Mr. Clotherstein—Dot poy of mine makes a fine business man some days.

Mr. Silverheimer—What makes you dink so?

Mr. Clotherstein—Vell, when he was measured a mans for a bair of pants yesterday he gomes to me und says: "Fadher, dot man youst got dree dollars in his pockets." I feels dem, und ven I says to him, loud. "Moses, bring me some of dose fife dollar pants," und he goes und geds me some of dose one dollar pants und I knocks dem down to der mans for dree dollars. Oh, Moses vos all ridt. He vill be a highly resbegded citizen some days.—New York Mercury.

A Faithless Lot.

Fanny—I dreamt about you last night.

Jennie—What did you dream?

"I dreamt that the young man to whom you were engaged had gone back on you."

"I dare say it is so. You can't rely on young men nowadays. Only woman is faithful to her love. So you dreamt my would-be husband went back on me? I wonder whether it is Charlie? He was here night before last and I noticed that he was cold and distant. I think, perhaps, it was Dick; he always was a flirt. I have never trusted him. I wonder if Frank has had the meanness to jilt me for that lavender-haired girl he took to the theater? Ah, that's the way these men are. You can't rely on three or four young men, much less on one."

Maimed.

In the calm of evening the old man was driving home the cows.

His mind dwelt on other days. He saw the fresh, healthy face of his only son turned in farewell for a moment, then gone, perhaps forever.

"It was the call of duty," the father murmured. "It is not for me to repine."

"My boy, my boy."

He raised his eyes.

He was come again. A wan face instead of the glow of health, an empty sleeve, a crutch, but it was he.

"Yes," the youth explained, "I have my degree all right. I'm a trifle shy on legs and arms, but I'd like to call your attention to my hair. Ain't she a beaut?"

Drawing his diploma from his bosom, he showed that he spoke truly.

Concession.

The great man with white side whiskers setting off his red neck couldn't think of it.

"I'm very sorry," he repeated, "but $7 a week is all I can afford to pay you."

The youth with pallid features and a longing look, lingered at the threshold.

"May I—"

He turned yet again to plead.

"—refer to my remuneration as salary instead of wages without fear of contradiction by you?"

There was a long and painful silence, after which the youth crept away, and despair was written all over his face.

There.

"Fair, fair, with golden hair."

He took the second seat from the head of the table in a sort of trance

"Fair, fair, with golden hair."

The words of the song rang in his ears. His thoughts were far away. Men spoke to him, but he heard them not. Women told him it was a beautiful day, but the information fell upon deaf ears.

"Fair, fair, with golden hair."

They brought him food. He started violently and looked furtively about him.

"Fare, fare, with golden hair."

Yes, there it was, two strands of it in the Irish stew.

The Pinch.

Her eyes were red with weeping.

"Unkind fate," she moaned.

The man who was tearing his hair at the other side of the room acquiesced.

"But there is no alternative," he said, in a hollow voice. "Sign."

He pointed to the paper before her. With trembling hand she took the pen.

"We've got to mortgage the home," he continued, "or take less ice each morning, and we must keep up appearances."

With a quick, dry sob, she wrote her name.

On Olympus.

Clio was doing most of the talking

"I beg your pardon," suddenly interrupted Melpomene.

The muse of history was at no pains to conceal her irritation.

"You wouldn't say that," she exclaimed petulantly, "if it wasn't that I have the reputation of repeating myself."

Terpsichore, who was practicing a new form of the York, laughed softly to herself.

Lame.

Her lashes drooped upon her suffused cheek.

"Are you prepared?" he demanded, in low, thrilling tones, "to stand before the world and declare your love for me?"

She gasped.

"No, no," she faltered, "not yet."

"Why, darling?"

Her head sank upon his shoulder.

"My vaccination took," she whispered.

Marriage in High Life.

There are people in New York who toady after the rich. The following conversation took place in a Third avenue street car:

"So your sister is married?"

"Yes, and she did very well—splendid. You have heard of Vanderbilt?"

"Oh, yes. Did she marry into that family?"

"Well, yes, so to speak. She married a nephew of Vanderbilt's chief cook. He is the driver of a street car."

Indifferent.

"Do you approve of early marriages?"

The vision in the hammock paused a moment ere replying.

"Yes," she murmured at last, "I can say that I do. A woman can dress the same in the afternoon as in the evening these days."

In the falling shadows she looked strangely beautiful.

Forewarned.

They were personal enemies.

"Sir," exclaimed the leading lady, as they stood together at the front of the stage, while the gallery held its breath, "I defy you to do your worst."

"Ha," said the villain aside, "she must know of eggs in the audience."

Turning then, he shouted aloud, and triumphantly:

"Never!"

Origin of Human Nature.

First Monkey (in a circus cage)—These people standing around appear to be very good-natured. See them smile.

Second Monkey—They are good-natured enough, but their assumption of superiority is insufferable. I should like to dynamite 'em.—Good News.

Fewer.

She—I have just been reading about the seven ages of man. I wonder how Shakespeare would have described the ages of women?

He—There would be but two ages of women.

She—How's that?

He—Sweet sixteen and not yet thirty.

Preferred Cheap Things.

Little Dot—I wish you'd buy me bargain counter stockings 'stead of such expensive ones.

Mother—You do? Why?

Little Dot—'Cause w'en my stockin's get holes in them, you always say they cost too much to throw away, and then I has to help mend them.—Good News.

A Practical Youth.

Boatman—Yes, I need a boy about my boat yard. Now, suppose I was away and some stranger should come here to hire a sail-boat. What questions would you ask him?

Boy—I'd ask him if he knew how to swim.

Boatman—You'll do.—Good News.

To Suit the Occasion.

Kirby Stone—Good heavens! Haven't you enough ball dresses now, without buying any more?

Mrs. Stone—Yes, my dear, for ordinary occasions. But this is to be a "Hard Times" party, and will require something out of the usual. A couple of hundred will do, I think.—Puck.

Doing Nobly.

Mrs. De Style—How is your daughter doing at college?

Mrs. De Fashion—Beautifully. Madame Bringemupp writes that she is the best dressed girl in her class.—Good News.

Manners Had Departed.

Little Johnny—Whoop! The girl has gone away.

Little Ethel—What of it?

Little Johnny—Now we won't have to leave any cake for manners.—Good News.

Worth the Trouble.

Friend—Why do you sell to those society people if you have such a time collecting the bills?

Florist—Hist! I use them as stool-pigeons, to lure in the nobodies who pay cash.—New York Weekly.

A Perfect Gem.

Mr. Gotham—Is that suburban cottage that you are advertising really desirable?

Agent—Desirable? Why, sir, it is painted in sixteen colors.—New York Weekly.

Not Worthy of Compliment.

"I could not think of a word to say."

"What was the matter with the compliments of the season?"

"Oh, the weather was too execrable for that."

Generous.

"They're bringing in a rope for you," announced the chairman of the vigilance committee.

"Thanks," said the doomed horse-thief. "A man in my position will smoke anything."

Charitable.

Bilks—My wife thinks there is no one in the world like me.

Gilks—Of course. The human race is not so bad as some would make out.

Worry and Indigestion.

Worry is a baneful curse and source of untold evils. It seams the face with lines and furrows and has a most depressing effect upon that hyper-sensitive organ, the stomach, which at such times becomes a most unwilling and laggard servant. Indeed, it is safe to say unless encouraged by a cheerful temper and bright, or at least hopeful, thoughts, the stomach will play truant or sulk and do no work which it can shirk. The physiological explanation of this is the close alliance of the great sympathetic nerves, which are worse than the telegraph for carrying bad news; the worry and anxiety which depress the brain produce simultaneously a semi-paralysis of the nerves of the stomach, gastric juices will not flow and—presto! there is indigestion. One sign of mental health is serenity of temper and a self-control that enables us to bear with equanimity and unruffled temper the petty trials and jars of life, especially those arising from contact with scolding, irascible, irritating folk. It is well to remember at such times that these unfortunates are their own worst enemies, and a cultivation of the art of not hearing will help us very much. It is a very useful art all through life and well worth some trouble to acquire.—Demorest's Magazine.

The Doll of Colored Children.

Did any one ever see little colored girls playing with any other sort of dolls than white ones? Perhaps such little girls sometimes have black dolls, but the writer often sees them at their doll play in a street which is almost exclusively inhabited by colored people, and has never seen them with any but white dolls. Generally the dolls are quite blonde. It is not for want of black dolls in the stores; they are numerous enough, and are much favored by white girls. The reason for it is of course, a very pathetic story—the long story of a race enslaved and despised until it has to a great extent lost its pride in itself and come to court another by a habit which is second nature. The mulattoes and quadroons are given a certain precedence and honor by the blacks, and the little mulatto girls will have none but white dolls, and blondes at that!—Boston Transcript.

"Your overcoat is awful dirty."

"Yes; I dropped it in the mud last night when I was coming home from the lodge."

"How did you happen to let go of it?"

"I didn't let go of it. I was inside of it when it fell in the mud."

"Yes, and I guess you had too many nightcaps inside of you."

An Indian Trader tells his story of Kickapoo Indian Sagwa.

Cured of a Distressing Stomach Difficulty.

RUSHVILLE, NEB., June. 5

Some time ago after suffering severely with stomach trouble and dyspepsia, which had been greatly aggravated by the alkali water of the western country, and when I had reached that stage where I could frequently hold nothing on my stomach, and would even throw up water as soon as drank, I learned from a Sioux Indian, who had been on a visit to the Kickapoo tribe, of a wonderful remedy called "Sagwa." I got him to procure some for me. The effect was remarkable. I tried to get more from the Indian, but he would not let me have more of his. He prized it so much he would not give it up. I then learned that Healy & Bigelow, of New Haven, Conn., had an arrangement with the Kickapoo tribe, and was putting their remedies on the market. I sent and got a bottle of the Kickapoo Indian Sagwa, and found it to be the same as that I had procured from the Sioux Indian. I got more, and after the use of a few bottles, I was not only relieved but entirely cured, and have stayed cured ever since.

I can eat anything set before me. Salt bacon, which used to have a most distressing effect, I can now eat and relish like an Indian.

I cannot speak too highly of the Kickapoo remedies, and cheerfully recommend them to anyone.

Foremost Baking Powder in all the World.

The World's Tribute to Dr Price's
Cream Baking Powder
Highest Award, both

Diploma.

1893

World's Fair

Medal and Diploma

AWARDED TO

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award was given on every claim, comprising superiority in leavening power, keeping properties, purity and excellence. The verdict has been given by the best jury ever assembled for such a purpose, backed by the recommendation of the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who made an elaborate examination and test of all the baking powders. This is pre-eminently the highest authority on such matters in America.

This verdict conclusively settles the question and proves that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is superior in every way to any other brand.

NOTE—The Chief Chemist rejected the Alum Powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considered them unwholesome.

"The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table."

Dr. Price's is peculiarly adapted for export, as neither long sea voyages nor climatic changes affect it. Will keep fresh and sweet for years.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER is the standard for purity and perfection the world over, and is beyond comparison. Its purity and goodness are household words. Always full weight. Never varies. Never disappoints.

It is a fact that certain envious manufacturers of Baking Powder, who lack the temerity to even place their goods in competition with Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder at the World's Fair, have, since it closed, advertised that they actually received an award. To an enlightened, appreciative public, comment on such an unfair and reprehensible act is quite unnecessary.

How Cream of Tartar is Made.

Cream of Tartar—which enters so largely into the manufacture of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder—is obtained from the tart wines of France, Germany, Austria, etc. The Crude Tartar, called Argols, is deposited on the sides of the wine casks during the fermentation of the wine. After the wine is drawn off this crystal deposit is removed, dried and exported to America, where the elaborate process of refining goes on, producing the snow-white crystals of Cream of Tartar. Specimens of this product, in all its conditions, from the crude Argols in its original wine cask to the purified and refined article embodied in Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder, were shown at the Price Baking Powder Company's late exhibit in the Agricultural Building, World's Columbian Exposition.

NOTE—The Cream of Tartar Refinery controlled by the Price Baking Powder Company is the most complete and extensive in the world.

Cherished in Memory.

The unusually fine weather of Wednesday made Memorial day a great success. In the morning the graves of the dead heroes buried in Evergreen cemetery were decorated with flowers and flags, as is the custom, by Pap Thomas Post G. A. R. and the Ladies Relief Corps. A large number of people assembled at the cemetery to witness these exercises which are so impressive and solemn. The graves of many not connected with the war were also decorated with flowers and evergreens and the effect although solemn was very pretty. The G. A. R. post after preforming their duty marched back to their hall on Sixth street.

The city presented a very gay appearance, there being an abundance of bunting and flag decorations on nearly all the business buildings and also many private residences. Thousands of people thronged the streets, the public offices, banks and business places being closed. In the afternoon the base ball game and gun club shoot drew large crowds to the fair grounds, but these attractions did not deteriorate from the parade which took place at 2:30 as follows:

Married.

The wedding of Miss Mamie Holmes, of this city, to G. W. Farnsworth occured at Rochester on Wednesday of last week. The many Brainerd friends of the couple extend congratulations.

At the house of the bride's parents on 7th street north on Saturday morning, May 26th, 1894, R. G. Valentine to Miss Ivy Smith, Rev. Geo. West officiating. The bride and groom are well known to all our readers and congratulations are in order Mr. and Mrs. Valentine went immediately to housekeeping on Kingwood street in a home which had been made ready for their reception before the wedding occured.

A very pretty wedding occurred yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at the Episcopal church, Joseph R. Westfall and Miss Elisabeth Bessie Small being the contracting parties. The ceremony was preformed by Rev. G. H. Davis and was witnessed by hosts of friends of the bride and groom. Miss Winnie Small was bridesmaid and Herman Casey the groom's best man. After the ceremony was over the wedding party went directly to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Small, where an elaborate banquet was served. The wedding party remained with the bride and groom until the departure of the 1:15 train on which they were passengers bound for Kansas City where they will spend their honeymoon returning to Brainerd in two weeks which will be their home in the future as in the past. Mr. Westfall is the junior member of the firm of Westfall Bros., gents furnishers, and has lived in this city for many years, the bride being a charming young lady with a large circle of admiring friends. The DISPATCH wishes them health, happiness and prosperity and a safe return to their Brainerd home.

Ward Committee.

Committees for the different wards have been appointed as follows.

THIRD WARD—Wm. Williamson, J. McDonald and Louis Goodell.

FIFTH WARD—R. H. Paine, A. E. Veon, Henry Mable.

Lured to Ruin.

Mention was made in this paper last week of the fact that the mother of two girls named Augusta and Stella Zievertowski came to this city from Little Falls and induced her daughters to turn from the life of shame they were leading here and return to their home with her. It now appears that two young men of that city, James Lemiux and Charles Baldi, have been arrested charged with the seduction of the girls.

The Little Falls Transcrit says: The girls have gained cosiderable notoriety during the past few weeks by being found in Cora Carey's house at Brainerd. After considerable persuasion their mother induced them to return home and then they entered their complaints.

Lemieux is a familiar chacter in this city and for a long time has been what is known as a "tin-horn" gambler. During the palmy days of gamblers he ran a game over Baldi's place. By his actions in the past he has brought disgrace upon his parents who are honest and respectable people.

Charles Baldi runs a confectionary store in the Vasaly building on Broadway. He is a sort of chum of Lemieux and generally has a crowd of the "crap" element around him.

Our teachers evidently enjoy their evening rambles as they are out for a stroll most every evening.

The store of Beach, Cole & Beach in the sleeper block was broken into and relieved of some of the contents in broad daylight Sunday afternoon, the work undoubtedly being that of boys. An entrance was gained by breaking out a light of glass in the rear of the building in the store room after which it was an easy matter to gain access to the store. Mr. Cole came down to the store in the afternoon and discovered cigars and sweet chocolate scattered over the floor. This caused him to look the building over and he found that the thieves had taken a quantity of cigars, about six pounds of climax plug tobacco, two boxes of gum and several packages of sweet chocolate. Whoever the light fingered gentry were they were probably scared away by Mr. Cole's entrance to the store as he heard the back doors shut as he came in and the articles were probably dropped in their hurry to get away.

Not Scotch Enough.

It is said that never was there a greater enthusiast over his own countrymen than Sir David Wilkie, the the celebrated Scotch artist. One amusing story connected with this trait of his character was told by Henry Thomson, who afterward grew to be quite a friend of Wilkie's.

"Thomson! Ye maun be a Scotch Thomson, I'll warrant," said Sir David as they sat together for the first time at an academy dinner.

"I am of that ilk," was the reply.

"My father was a Scotchman."

"Was he, really?" exclaimed Wilkie, grasping the other's hand warmly.

"And my mother was Irish."

"Aye, aye, was she really?" and the hand relaxed its grasp a trifle.

"And I was born in England."

Upon that Wilkie dropped his new friend's hand and almost turned his back upon him. His disappointment was so evident that Thomson actually felt regret instead of indignation at this treatment and later on endeavored to counteract the effect of his unfortunate nationality. But for that day Wilkie had no further desire to talk to him and showed it plainly.—Youth's Companion.

That the plat and survey of the proposed improvement in the matter of opening and extending Sixth street in the City of Brainerd, south from the south line of Willow street in a straight line to the south section line of section 36, town 45, range 31, made and presented to the city council by the city engineer, pursuant to an order of the city council, adopted on the 7th day of May, A. D. 1894, be and the same is hereby adopted by the city council, as showing correctly the character and extent of the improvement actually agreed upon and ordered by the city council, and such plat and survey is directed to be filed with the city clerk of said city.

And that Michel Hagberg, James S. Gardner and W. D. McKay all freeholders of said city, no two of whom reside in the same ward, be and they are hereby appointed commissioners to view the premises and to ascertain and award the amount of damages and compensation to be paid to the owners of property which is to be taken or injured by such improvement, and to assess the amount of such damages and compensation and the expense of the improvement upon the land and property to be benefited by such improvement, in proportion to the benefits to be received by each parcel and without regard to cash valuation, but not exceeding the actual benefits to any property so assessed.

Passed May 28th, 1894.

A similar resolution was also passed in regard to the widening of Willow and Seventh streets.

Married.

The wedding of Miss Mamie Holmes, of this city, to G. W. Farnsworth occured at Rochester on Wednesday of last week. The many Brainerd friends of the couple extend congratulations.

At the house of the bride's parents on 7th street north on Saturday morning, May 26th, 1894, R. G. Valentine to Miss Ivy Smith, Rev. Geo. West officiating. The bride and groom are well known to all our readers and congratulations are in order Mr. and Mrs. Valentine went immediately to housekeeping on Kingwood street in a home which had been made ready for their reception before the wedding occured.

A very pretty wedding occurred yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at the Episcopal church, Joseph R. Westfall and Miss Elisabeth Bessie Small being the contracting parties. The ceremony was preformed by Rev. G. H. Davis and was witnessed by hosts of friends of the bride and groom. Miss Winnie Small was bridesmaid and Herman Casey the groom's best man. After the ceremony was over the wedding party went directly to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Small, where an elaborate banquet was served. The wedding party remained with the bride and groom until the departure of the 1:15 train on which they were passengers bound for Kansas City where they will spend their honeymoon returning to Brainerd in two weeks which will be their home in the future as in the past. Mr. Westfall is the junior member of the firm of Westfall Bros., gents furnishers, and has lived in this city for many years, the bride being a charming young lady with a large circle of admiring friends. The DISPATCH wishes them health, happiness and prosperity and a safe return to their Brainerd home.

Committees for the different wards have been appointed as follows.

THIRD WARD—Wm. Williamson, J. McDonald and Louis Goodell.

FIFTH WARD—R. H. Paine, A. E. Veon, Henry Mable.

Lured to Ruin.

Mention was made in this paper last week of the fact that the mother of two girls named Augusta and Stella Zievertowski came to this city from Little Falls and induced her daughters to turn from the life of shame they were leading here and return to their home with her. It now appears that two young men of that city, James Lemiux and Charles Baldi, have been arrested charged with the seduction of the girls.

The Little Falls Transcrit says: The girls have gained cosiderable notoriety during the past few weeks by being found in Cora Carey's house at Brainerd. After considerable persuasion their mother induced them to return home and then they entered their complaints.

Lemieux is a familiar chacter in this city and for a long time has been what is known as a "tin-horn" gambler. During the palmy days of gamblers he ran a game over Baldi's place. By his actions in the past he has brought disgrace upon his parents who are honest and respectable people.

Charles Baldi runs a confectionary store in the Vasaly building on Broadway. He is a sort of chum of Lemieux and generally has a crowd of the "crap" element around him.

GULL RIVER ITEMS.

The dance at Columbian hall was a success and most of the Gull River people attended. Several Brainerd people honored us with their presence. There were 47 tickets sold.

Farmer Jones bought a nice team at Brainerd Thursday.

The river drivers are making the town lively for a few days.

Wm. Casey has taken his house down here and will move it to Brainerd where it will be erected again.

Several Brainerd Baptists honored us with their presence last Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Wood, Mr. Hayes and Miss Snow being among the number. They came to Sunday school and held twilight services in the evening.

Our teachers evidently enjoy their evening rambles as they are out for a stroll most every evening.

W. Barney left for Minneapolis Saturday last.

Wm. Best and Wm. Green have gone to Little Falls to work in the Warehauser mill.

B. Hanscome and Miss Blanch Howard were united in marriage recently. They are well known and much respected here and we extend congratulations to them and wish them much happiness.

The store of Beach, Cole & Beach in the sleeper block was broken into and relieved of some of the contents in broad daylight Sunday afternoon, the work undoubtedly being that of boys. An entrance was gained by breaking out a light of glass in the rear of the building in the store room after which it was an easy matter to gain access to the store. Mr. Cole came down to the store in the afternoon and discovered cigars and sweet chocolate scattered over the floor. This caused him to look the building over and he found that the thieves had taken a quantity of cigars, about six pounds of climax plug tobacco, two boxes of gum and several packages of sweet chocolate. Whoever the light fingered gentry were they were probably scared away by Mr. Cole's entrance to the store as he heard the back doors shut as he came in and the articles were probably dropped in their hurry to get away.

Not Scotch Enough.

It is said that never was there a greater enthusiast over his own countrymen than Sir David Wilkie, the the celebrated Scotch artist. One amusing story connected with this trait of his character was told by Henry Thomson, who afterward grew to be quite a friend of Wilkie's.

"Thomson! Ye maun be a Scotch Thomson, I'll warrant," said Sir David as they sat together for the first time at an academy dinner.

"I am of that ilk," was the reply.

"My father was a Scotchman."

"Was he, really?" exclaimed Wilkie, grasping the other's hand warmly.

"And my mother was Irish."

"Aye, aye, was she really?" and the hand relaxed its grasp a trifle.

"And I was born in England."

Upon that Wilkie dropped his new friend's hand and almost turned his back upon him. His disappointment was so evident that Thomson actually felt regret instead of indignation at this treatment and later on endeavored to counteract the effect of his unfortunate nationality. But for that day Wilkie had no further desire to talk to him and showed it plainly.—Youth's Companion.

Attention

In time to any irregularity of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels may prevent serious consequences. Indigestion, costiveness, headache, nausea, biliousness, and vertigo indicate certain functional derangements, the best remedy for which is Ayer's Pills. Purely vegetable, sugar-coated, easy to take and quick to assimilate, this is the ideal family medicine—the most popular, safe, and useful aperient in pharmacy. Mrs. M. A. BROCKWELL, Harris, Tenn., says:

"Ayer's Cathartic Pills cured me of sick headache and my husband of neuralgia. We think there is

No Better Medicine,

and have induced many to use it.

"Thirty-five years ago this Spring, I was run down by hard work and a succession of colds, which made me so feeble that it was an effort for me to walk. I consulted the doctors, but kept sinking lower until I had given up all hope of ever being better. Happening to be in a store, one day, where medicines were sold, the proprietor noticed my weak and sickly appearance, and, after a few questions as to my health, recommended me to try Ayer's Pills. I had little faith in these or any other medicine, but concluded, at last, to take his advice and try a box. Before I had used them all, I was very much better, and two boxes cured me. I am now 80 years old; but I believe that if it had not been for Ayer's Pills, I should have been in my grave long ago. I buy 6 boxes every year, which make 210 boxes up to this time, and I would no more be without them than without bread."—H. H. Ingraham, Rockland, Me.

Journalism is Improving.

Journalism at Brainerd is improving. Two of the newspaper publishers have joined the church as a result of Evangelist Hunt's visit, and great pressure is being brought to bear upon the third man. First and foremost came Editor Halstead into open court and yielded up the fight with his satanic majesty who is so aggressive. This was not very suprising, for Halstead was a Republican. But when Editor Stivers, who not for any religous traits has been known as "the friar," made this week a public confession of faith; threw four columns of saloon "ads," out of his paper, and was recived into the church. This was a sensation. The friar is a Democrat. Editor "Bob" Ingersoll is the only remaining editor in the City of Pine, untouched by Hunt's eloquence, and he cannot hope to hold out much longer.—St. Cloud Journal Press.

Republicans Are Alert.

EDITORS DISPATCH:—A republican caucus was called for this precinct for Tuesday night last, the purpose being the election of delegates to the county convention. Promptly at 8 o'clock the school house was filled with earnest, intelligent farmers. After the stated business had been transacted short impromptu addresses were made by Charley Kreck, G. G. Thompson, D. Holmes and A. G. Emmons, and while none of the speakers lay any claim to being public orators, they showed a happy faculty of touching a responsive chord in the hearts of their hearers, and were heartily applauded. Democrats of life long standing fairly tumbled over each other in their eagerness to affiliate with the party that champions protection to American labor and American industries. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Davenport's will be "in line."

A REPUBLICAN.

Cut and Dried.

The politicians have no use for Senator Geissel and he is to be placed upon the shelf this year, so it has been whispered to us. His name will not even be mentioned when the bosses meet in convention. The thing has been all cut and dried and Dr. Hemstead, of Brainerd, will be nominated for senator. In what has Senator Geissel so greviously sinned that he should be treated thus? Mr. Geissel is deserving of better treatment at the hands of Democrats of this district. Simple justice demand that it be unanimous, providing he wants it. But the Little Falls politicians have so decreed and Geissel must be shelved.—Royalton Banner.

Things Political.

Aitkin will endeavor to get the democratic congressional convention.

P. V. Coppernoll is hustling for the nomination as judge of the Fifteenth judicial district.

If the pine land ring succeeds in turning down the people's candidate for state auditor, R. C. Dunn, the people had better turn the state government over to them entirely.

Duluth will go over to Brainerd with a big delegation Aug. 28, and do her part towards making the day a big one. Brainerd will give us all a cordial welcome, and will help us out in nominating our candidate—will we offend the Towne men if we say—Hon. O. D. Kinney?—News Tribune.

The Aitkin Age says it has heard that several of their prominent Republican's entertain an ambition to represent this district in the next legislature. All of the aspirants, if they are such, would doubtless make creditable representatives, but Brother Benard of the Grand Rapids Magnet who may be supposed to be on the inside of Republican politics has informed the Minneapolis Tribune that the next senator from this district will be D. M. Gunn of Grand Rapids and the representative a Hubbard county man.

It is certain that R. C. Dunn will have the solid vote of the delegates from the counties of the Sixth congressional district. This is as it should be. He is now one of the most prominent candidates in the field for a state office and is assured of support from all parts of the state. This entitles him, taken in connection with his known ability and his service to the state in the pine land cases, to a cordial hearty and solid support from this congressional district. All the leading Republicans of the district, nearly, are now agreed upon the wisdom and justice of this course. It matters not how many other candidates for the state offices there are from the Sixth district. His nomination may affect some of the others, but that is their misfortune, and it would be folly to take support from him to aid them, when by so doing it might endanger his nomination.

The first candidate to be voted for in the convention from the Sixth district will be Bob Dunn, and unless we greatly err, he will get the entire 31 votes from St. Louis county, and they will stand by him as long as he needs them or long as they will do him any good. It will not be half hearted support, but an earnsst one from the word go.—Duluth News Tribune.

A Colored Woman's White Rats.

If the Pied Piper of Hamelin should ever take it into his head to pay Washington a visit, he would find that he had a rival already installed here and the field fully occupied. The rival in question is Sarah Baker, a colored woman who lives in Georgetown, near the junction of Congress street and the canal. She raises white rats, not for sale or profit, but merely for the love of the rats. Her room, where she and her four footed, long-tailed proteges reside, is a queer apartment, filled up with cages, piled one over the other, and scores if not hundreds of the pink eyed, snowy furred rodents, making up such a ratful vision as would ruin the trade of the best saloon in Washington if the customers had to pass through it on their way after a drink.

The rats are all the descendants of two or three pairs that were given to a woman a year or two ago. They multiplied and increased, and declining to kill any of them Mrs. Baker provided new cages as the rats filled up their old quarters, until now it takes her the better part of her spare time to feed and attend to the wants of her file tailed family.

The rats all know her and will come to the front of their cages and take food from between her lips, or if given the liberty of the room some of the corpulent old fellows will sit upright on the palm of her hand and wash their faces and comb out their whiskers with the gravity of a burgomaster.—Washington Post.

Care of the Shoes.

Nothing is more damaging to fine finished leather than a coating of soil left to harden upon the shoes. The care of shoes, after exposure to wet and mud, is more in theory than in practice. The coating of soil kills the surface of the leather and leaves innumerable fine scratches upon it. Notice people on the street of a damp, sloppy day, and you will find that at least half of them do not wear rubbers. Some people won't wear them at all except in snow or slush. Tender feet, the trouble of putting them on and off and the liability to leave them behind are reasons for eschewing them.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Her Hope.

Myrtylla—So you are going to marry old Mr. Goldrocks?

Ethylle—Yes, I am.

Myrtylla—Why, he's almost 60 years old and has buried six wives.

Ethylle—I know all that, but I do not doubt you remember the story of the pitcher that went to the well. I hope to break the spell.—Vogue.

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made and dated March 10th A. D. 1891 by Emile Gelinas and Josephine Gelinas, his wife, mortgagors, to The American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, Limited, mortgagee, and duly filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Crow Wing and State of Minnesota, on the 14th day of March A. D. 1891, at ten o'clock and thirty minutes A. M. in Book I, of Mortgages on page 620, conveying and mortgaging the following described land lying and being in the county of Crow Wing and State of Minnesota, to-wit:—The north half (½) of the southeast quarter and the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of Section thirty-five (35) of township forty-three (43) range thirty-two (32) containing one hundred and twenty (120) acres, more or less, according to the Government survey thereof.

No action has been instituted at law to recover the amount secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

There was due on said mortgage debt on the 30th day of October, A. D. 1893, the sum of five hundred and eighty-three dollars and forty-four cents ($583.44), and said mortgagee had, besides the security herein mentioned, other security for said debt, which security was duly advertised for sale, and duly sold, and after paying the costs and disbursements of said sale, left remaining the sum of ninety-two dollars and thirty cents ($92.30) to apply on said debt and the interest thereon, and at the time of said sale, left still due and owing said mortgagee the sum of four hundred and ninety-four dollars and twenty-one cents ($494.21). There is claimed to be now due thereon, and is actually due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of five hundred and ten dollars and one cent ($510.01), which includes four hundred and ninety-four dollars and twenty-one cents ($494.21) principal, and fifteen dollars and eighty cents ($15.80) interest.

And whereas, it is stipulated in said mortgage that in case of default in the payment of principal or interest or any part thereof when due, then and in that case, the said mortgagee might declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage due and payable at once.

And whereas, default has been made in the payment of the interest, and the said mortgagee has elected to declare the whole sum due,

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by reason of said default and by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed, and the premises therein described will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest and twenty-five dollars ($25.00) attorney's fee stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure thereof, and costs and disbursements allowed by law, which sale will be made by the sheriff of the county of Crow Wing and State of Minnesota, at the front door of the county court house, in the City of Brainerd, in said county and state, on Saturday the 23rd day of June A. D. 1894, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of sale, as provided by law.

A Multitude of Counsel.

The opinion is rapidly gaining ground that a remedy which has proved efficient in the hands of the skillful practioner, a remedy prepared by him as the result of years of observation and experience, for the treatment of disease in individual cases, may, if placed by the same practitioner within the reach of the reading public, be instrumental in curing many who otherwise have remained ignorant of it. "True" you say, "but there are so many remedies, how are we to choose?"

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examinations and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

BRAINERD. - - - - MINN.

Immense schools of weakfish have made their appearance off Anglesea. Catches of 100 fish to a man are common. The fish run from one to two pounds in weight.

One of the oldest tunes in the world is said to be the air sung to the words "We won't go home till morning." It is known to date back to the time of the Crusaders.

It would appear from a London cablegram that it's "Scotland to the rescue." Several Scotch coal owners have shipped a number of steamer loads of coal to New York in consequence of the coal strikers in the United States.

The London paper the African Review devoted to the interests of the dark continent, will be edited by the author of "She." If vivid imagination is the chief talent sought, Mr, Haggard has the requirements.

Mrs. Lease lies in a hotel at Olathe, Kas., seriously ill from nervous prostration because of a persistent crank who follows her and threatens her life. Lock the fellow up. The country cannot afford to lose its most distinctive political figure.

Anna Gould's engagement to Harriman has been broken off and Howard denies his alliance. It is hard to believe that those young people, apparently so blessed with everything that mortal heart can desire, are practicing for the stage, but it looks that way.

The resignation of the French ministry following its defeat on what appears to be a question of small importance, is indicative of the very slender tenure on which it has held office. There are so many factions in the French chamber of deputies that it is difficult to form a ministry which can command a majority on all the numerous issues which come up in that body.

Base ball has broken out with great severity among the Indians on the Western plains. It is a little singular that the noble red man always adopts the vices, but not the virtues of his white brother. He takes to the smallpox and whisky bottle as naturally as a duck takes to water, and it now seems probable that the race decimation will be completed by indulgence in the base ball mania.

The storm of last week did all kinds of mischief on the lakes and in Chicago. One of its unkind deeds was the destruction of the famous old cottonwood tree that stood on the site of the Dearborn massacre. The remains have been pretty thoroughly appropriated already for souvenir purposes by people who appreciate what a place the veteran had in the history and traditions of Chicago.

Keep Them Growing.

Your domestic animals of all kinds must be kept in prime healthy growing condition in order to make profitable ones. Any animal which is stunted in its early youth will fail to make as good an ultimate development as it would have done otherwise, no matter how much you may pamper it in after life, and whatever is accomplished later on is done at far greater cost than would have been the case if it had been given a fair start. It is just the same with growing stock as with growing a crop—you cannot by subsequent cultivation make amends for neglecting the initial preparation.

It should be understood that good feeding and over-feeding are not the same things. Good feeding consists in supplying such amount and quality as can be easily digested and assimilated, and neither more nor less. It is only such food which at all benefits an animal. Excessive feeding decreases the power of assimilation, as an overloaded stomach cannot properly do the work which nature intended it should. In order to determine the line between good feeding and over-feeding the personal traits of each animal should be studied. Economy and correct methods of feeding can only be reached when you feed individually.

The method of feeding stock should vary, according to the end you wish to serve. One ration may be best for growth, another for fattening, and still another for milk and butter. To decide between these you should know something of the nutritive values of different foods and to combine them to the best effect. If you do not, you cannot procure the fullest possible profit from your work.—Exchange.

The Characters in "Marcella."

As might have been expected, continues the same entertaining gossip, the infallible ones among us have set themselves to work to identify the characters in Mrs. Ward's new novel, "Marcella." It was not, however, a matter of great difficulty to find the "Fabian" in the "Venturist Society," or the Labor Collector in the "Labor Clarion," but those only who are well behind the scenes will be able to pick out Messrs. William Morris, Walter Crane, Keir Hardie and Champion. Marcella, herself, is said to be a judicious amalgam of Lady Carlisle and Miss Margaret Harkness, so much at the time beloved of the "Dockers." Mr. Arthur Balfour is supposed to figure in the novel in the disguise of Aldous Raeburn. It is decidedly a relief to turn from the "neurotic" women who have had recently such a very long inning to the girl whose mistakes are the result of noble, but misdirected "enthusiasm for humanity." Marcella does not clamor for more worlds (of men) to conquer! She aims, not always wisely, but with the zeal of an ardent crusader, at the regeneration of the world.—Ladies' Pictorial.

An English May Day.

Baroness Burdette-Coutts clasped the gold chain and cross that Mr. Ruskin annually gives to the "May Queen" at Whitelands College, Chelsea, round the neck of Miss Emma Hands, the young lady elected to that pretty distinction by her fellow-students. The May Day observances began with a festal service in the college chapel, which was beautifully decorated with spring flowers; and after last year's "Queen Dowager" had gracefully abdicated, and a chaplet of apple blossoms had been placed on the head of the newly found sovereign, an intricate May-pole dance was performed in the great hall while the "Queen" retired to assume her regal robes. Baroness Burdett-Coutts said that she hoped the day would be a pleasantly memorable one in all their young lives, and that the winner of Mr. Ruskin's beautiful gift would find it one of her greatest pleasures in the future to bring to other minds and homes some of the lessons of love and gentleness to be found in his works.—London Telegraph.

HONOR SOLDIER DEAD

Washington Cemeteries Visited by Immense Throngs—Beautiful Floral Tributes Left at the Tombs of Lincoln and Grant.

Washington, May 30.—Decoration day was observed here here even more generally than heretofore. All the government buildings were closed most of the day and business throughout the city was generally suspended. The various cemeteries were visited by throngs, especially Arlington, where rest so many illustrious dead.

New York, May 30.—The usual Decoration day ceremonies were held in this city. As usual, since the death of Gen. Grant, Riverside Park was the center of attraction, and an immense number of floral tributes were left at the tomb of the dead soldier.

Springfield, Ill., May 30. — Oakridge cemetery, in which stands the monument erected to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, and where the remains of the martyr president lie, was visited to-day by thousands of people, and many beautiful floral tributes were placed in the tomb. Special services were held at the base of the monument during the afternoon.

St. Paul, May 30.—Decoration day was celebrated generally throughout the Northwest. In St. Paul and Minneapolis special services were held in many churches and at the various cemeteries.

SWEPT BY FLOODS.

Enormous Loss of Life and Property From the Bursting of a Dam.

Calcutta, May 30.—In addition to the loss of 200 lives by the bursting of a dam, formed by a land-slip in Charkkupria, Kulu, and the destrustion of live stock and dwellings which accompanied it, disastrous floods have wrought much damage in North Cachar. The Jetinga has overflowed its banks and has inundated an area of hundreds of miles. The result of this inundation has been a tremendous loss of property, and in addition the loss of life is believed to be enormous. Whole villages have been destroyed in a number of sections of the flood-visited country. The flood is pronounced to be the most severe in many years. The water swept onward like a forty-foot wall, sweeping away several villages, among them one having eighty houses.

BALLOT FRAUDS CONFESSED.

Sutherland Tells of Fictitious Votes Cast at the Neovember Election.

New York, May 30.—When Kenneth Sutherland, companion of John Y. McKane in Gravesend election frauds, was brought into court for sentence, a written confession by the prisoner was read. In it he said that of his own knowledge between 800 and 900 fictitious votes were cast out of a total of 1,512 in the Second district alone, and that the whole number of fictitious votes cast at the November election in Gravesend was about 1,500. "I folded with my own hands two lots of paper ballots, each 100 or 200 in number, which were fictitiously cast in my presence on that day." In 1892, according to Sutherland, out of a total of 2,000 votes cast 1,200 were fictitious. He refused to inculpate others in his confession.

Perrin Dying.

New London, Wis., May 30.—Phelps Perrin, recently pardoned after serving nearly five years for the theft of $40,000 from the Iron Exchange bank at Hurley, is dying. He has been unconscious for nearly thirty-six hours and can live but a short time. Perrin is at his mother's home here. He has made no confession, and, as the money stolen from the Hurley bank was buried by Perrin after he and Baker separated after the deed, it is believed the money will be lost. Baker, it is said, does not know where the money is concealed.

Prospective Lynching.

Omaha, May 30.—A Lexington, Neb., special to the Bee says: A mob is now organized here to take from jail Ben Hitton and William Thompson, charged with raping a sixteen-year-old girl and lynch them. The mob banished Rufus Gun and Sam Robert, giving them three minutes to leave town or be tarred and feathered. There are three murderers confined in the jail.

Ramsey Defeated.

Denver, May 30.—The railway telegraphers' election to-day resulted in defeat for Grand Chief Telegrapher Ramsey, his successor being Walter V. Powell of Wichita, Kan. The vote stood 59 to 56. The telegraphers indorsed the action of Grand Chief Ramsey in suspending the Omaha charter, and expressed a willingness to restore the charter if the Omaha division would obey Ramsey's former orders. F. E. Gilliland promised it would be done.

The Countess Unworthy.

London, May 30. — Countess Russell has asked the courts for leave to petition for a restoration of conjugal rites with her husband, Earl Russell. The latter pleads that the petitioner has been guilty of cruelty in alleging a disgraceful offense against him, and that, therefore, she is not entitled to her restoration of conjugal rights. Leave, however, was granted the countess to make the petition as requested.

Prof. Dowe Is Safe.

Chicago, May 30.—The police were today notified by the friends of Prof. John Dowe, of the South Dakota university, that they had learned that he was now on the ocean, bound for Scotland. For several days the professor's friends have been concerned about him, as he left a large amount of personal baggage in Chicago, and it was feared he had met with some mishap.

Breckinridge Won't Talk.

Louisville, Ky., May 30.—A special to the Times from Lexington says: Congressman Breckinridge will express no opinion about Judge Bradley's ruling. He says that he will carry the matter to the supreme court and test it there.

Frye Is Honored.

Cincinnati, May 30.—Gen. Frye has just received a commission from Coxey as commander-in-chief of the commonweal army of the United States. Gen. Frye has gone to Hyattsville, where he will make his headquarters.

A Spencer, Iowa, Girl and Her Most Remarkable Marriage.

Spencer Iowa, Special.—The marriage of Miss Etta Tracy of Spencer to Dr. Woodcock of New York was consummated yesterday. The contracting parties first met at Arnold's Park, where the young lady was employed as a dining room girl, and 'tis said the groom was first attracted by the kindness of the girl who, when he was helpless, was so accommodating as to lace his shoes, which favor the other girls had refused, though he pleaded his inability to perform this service for himself, owing to lumbar rheumatism. The infatuated gentleman proposed marriage, and in order to fit her for the position of wife, placed her in a good school, he taking up his residence near. This spring the romantic courtship was terminated in the most happy manner, and the loving pair will spend some time wandering among the wonders of the old world, when, it is said, they propose to return and make Spencer their home.

Indian Affairs.

Washington Special.—The senate committee on Indian affairs authorized a favorable report on the bill providing for the opening of the Untah and Uncompagre Indian reservations in Utah. The bill provides for the allotment of a portion of the land of the reservations in severalty to the Indians, and the opening of that remaining to settlement. The committee also ordered favorably reported an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill introduced by Senator Pettigrew for the ratification of the treaty with the Yankton Sioux Indians.

Bourgeois Decline.

New York, Special—The Herald's dispatch from Paris says: M. Bourgeois has declined to accept the responsibility of forming a ministry, and no one else has thus far been selected for the task. It will not be astonishing, however, if M. Boulanger, the present minister of colonies, should play an important role in the next ministerial combination.

WHITE CAP OUTRAGE.

One Man Killed and Four Others Wounded.

New Orleans, May 30.—The town of New Road, the seat of justice of Pointe Coupee parish, was the scene the other night of a serious White Cap outrage, full particulars of which are not yet known because of the isolation of the town. George Paul, an aged negro, offended one of the White Caps. A party of the latter called at the negro's house for the purpose of whipping him. They rapped at his door for admittance, but Paul in some way had got wind of the proposed visit and had his two sons, a brother and brother-in-law in his home to assist him in protecting his life. On shattering the door the White Cappers found Paul and his body guard ready to defend themselves and a fusilade of shots followed. Paul was killed outright and four others were badly wounded. After the shooting the White Caps mounted their horses and rode off. Advices from New Road state that the sheriff and his deputies have arrested two white men as being implicated in the shooting.

LIVES ARE LOST.

Homes Destroyed and Crops Ruined in the Frazer River Country.

San Francisco, May 30.—The Examiner to-day has a special from Victoria, B. C., telling of appalling waste and destruction resulting from floods along the Frazer river and numerous tributaries. Many thousand acres of fruitful land are covered with water, on which floats the debris of ruined homes, costly dykes and expensive bridges. Hundreds of people are seeking shelter on rafts and on the highlands, and loss of life is reported. The flooded district embraces the most extensively cultivated region of the province extending fifty miles along the barks of the Frazer from New Westminster. It is stated that the great bridge of the Canadian Pacific at Revelstoke is gone, and another at Mission City. All crops are ruined.

Terrible War Machine.

Paris, May 30.—La Partie to-day announces that the notorious Turpin, the inventor whose name some time ago came prominently before the public in connection with the invention of the explosive known as melinite, and who was subsequently imprisoned, angered at the refusal of France to purchase his latest invention, has left the country and has sold to the powers composing the Dreibund, the secret of the manufacture of a terrible war machine. The latter is said to comprise a new explosive and a new projectile which, it is claimed, will completely transform the art of warfare and the conditions under which it is waged, rendering its possessors the masters of Europe. Turpin yielded to the personal urgings of a foreign sovereign and has received several million francs on account.

Kelly Is Pleased.

St. Louis, Mo., May 30.—Kelly's industrials were visited by at least 10,000 people at their camp to-day. Gen. Kelly spent the morning making his men comfortable for their stay here, which will be until Friday, when they will continue their journey to Washington via the Mississippi and Ohio rivers. The general is much pleased with the cordiality and liberality shown the army at St. Louis by St. Louisans. About 100 new members were recruited to-day.

Japanese Immigration.

Guatemala, May 30.—The government has been asked for a charter for a Japanese immigration society which wants exception from personal taxation for immigrants and officers of the society and the right to make private contracts introducing Japanese agricultural laborers for six years. The request is favorably regarded.

A Banquet to United States Naval Officers in London.

London, Special.—The banquet tendered to Admiral Erben, Capt. Mahan and the officers of the United States cruiser Chicago by officers of the English navy and army and distinguished citizens of Great Britain was held last night in St. James hall. The principal table was placed upon a platform under the organ loft, from which hung immense English and American flags. Intertwined Union jacks and stars and stripes were placed in many parts of the hall. A broad band inscribed "Blood Is Thicker Than Water" was suspended from the gallery opposite the organ loft. Two British naval officers escorted each officer of the Chicago to his alloted seat. The officers wore uniforms. The other guests were in evening dress, but most of them wore order and sashes. Chaplain Shearman pronounced grace, both before and after the banquet. Lord George Hamilton offered a toast to the queen and President Cleveland. He said that Queen Victoria and President Cleveland were at the head of the two great English-speaking nationalities of the worldV, the heads of governments whose authority was exercised over a large portion of the globe and a still larger proportion of the human race paid them honor and respect. Many words of friendship were spoken during the evening.

Struck Gas in Colorado.

A FEMININE FENIAN.

"What! Another fenian!"

"Waal, I wouldn't go ez fur ez callin' her thet, James Francis. Of course, bein' a Methody, er Baptis', either hard er soft, kinder sots 'spicion on her in Otter Crik, but a fenian!" The worthy postmistress shook her head in charitable doubt. "I wouldn't prefer sich a ser'us charge. She's a pleasant spoken young critter an' not 'tall rev'looshanry lookin'."

"Kelly wuz a fenian," asserted a veteran farmer, deftly balancing a demijohn of molasses against the sundry contents of a huge bandanna handkerchief. "Pears ez ef this deestric' is jes' runnin' riot after sich firebrands."

Kelly was the late incumbent of Otter Creek, discharged by the selectmen on three counts; age, subscription to incendiary literature and indifference to arithmetical accuracy, as proved by his favorite formula, "If you come within three figgers of the answer you're nigh enough."

"She hes smilin' eyes," irrelevantly remarked an imprudent youth sorting out hand rakes in the corner.

"Hit a'ready, Abe," sneered the veteran. "Smilin' eyes be blowed! Fer a sarviceable schoolmarm give me a savage lookin' gal. Howdy s'pose this un 'ill rassle 'ith the mill gang?"

"I don't favor her persuasion," candidly admitted the stalwart James Francis, "but for all that I'm for giving her a fair trial, even though she does turn the hoss' head on the wrong road to meetin'."

"'Taint the hoss' head alone 'at 'll be turned the wrong way," scoffed the grumbler; "every durn young fool in Otter Crik is ready ter foller suit. Smilin' eyes, indeed! I don't b'lieve she kin figger through fraxions, an' fust chance I git I'm goin' ter stick her on the contents of them logs out'n the school yard. I don't b'lieve in wimmin teachers anyway; but ef the Crik can't hire a master for $75 a term an' board, why then it orter look out fer the homelies' lookin' female 'at could be hired fer money. Enythin' at all pass'ble makes fair idjits of you young fellers."

And grimly "hefting" his burden the veteran departed, followed by a respectful "cantanker'us, meddlin' old cuss!" from the enamored Abe.

"Here she comes now, a-caperin' down the hill with them Tucker children," remarked the postmistress, a pleasant smile lighting up her comely face. "It do beat all how a great growed gal, an' a schoolma'am at thet, kin frisk along ez giddy an' friv'lus ez eny of her scholars."

Quite unconscious of the interest she had excited, the young teacher came blithely down the hill, her own rapid step still further quickened by the impatient urging of her small charges, the little sailor hat tilted forward over a face pretty only in its youthful curves and happy, frank expression. The postmistress was quite right in deciding that there was nothing revolutionary in her appearance; Abe also was also correct in his opinion of her eyes, and James Francis, viewing her critically, became conscious of an alarming indifference to the manifold evils lurking in her persuasion. So impressed was he by the unfairness of his original remark that, after investing in chocolates for which he had no earthly use, he requested the genial Mrs. Forbes to observe silence on the subject, a favor readily granted and quite as cheerfully withdrawn under the irresistible temptations of a cozy tea, with the girl teacher as her guest.

Teaching in the country is the ordeal through which nearly every tyro must pass before being allowed to engage in city service. Though not the ideal pursuit painted by pen artists, it is the stepping-stone from which many an ambitious worldling hopes to climb to the heights of fame. In her unobtrusive way Cecelia Desmond was ambitious. She coveted a college course, and indulged roseate dreams of a future crowned with honors, won by personal effort. As a step in the right direction, when the Otter Creek vacancy offered she promptly packed her simple wardrobe and said good-by to the dear ones in her city home. It was the first separation, and the ache of parting throbbing in six hearts expressed itself in a copious shower of youthful tears, quickly dried, however, in a flash of fun as the strenuous efforts of the stage driver to lash the trunk to the tailboard resulted in the breaking of the rope, sending him sprawling in the roadway.

After a month's experience of the new life the young teacher was beginning to realize that fame asks much of its votaries. The routine of work was wretchedly monotonous, varied only by occasional skirmishes among the different sections of the district. The constituency of Otter Creek academy had many subtle subdivisions based on family feuds or political and religious variance. To unite so many elements in even seeming harmony, and at the same time impart sufficient instruction to satisfy the rather exacting community, was a task of gigantic proportions, and one which the girl in her home letters frequently asserted could be accomplished only by the united efforts of a statesman, a professor and a police officer. As comparison is a relief or a torture free to all, Cecelia fell into the habit of contrasting her fate with her surroundings, and thus became fully conscious that her lot was not as flowery as were the meadows stretching along the slope and tranquilly monopolizing the fertile interval.

From the meadows her thoughts reverted naturally to their owner, the fair-minded young farmer who had championed her cause even while condemning her belief. He was one of nature's noblemen, she admitted rather grudgingly, and censured herself severely for allowing her thoughts to dwell pleasurably on his masterful manner and vigorous, manly beauty. At such times, to atone for her mental vagaries, she locked herself in her sultry chamber, and, forcing her intellect to the contemplation of some abstruse problem, beguiled herself into the belief that she was fairly reveling in an intellectual Elysum.

Notwithstanding this severe, self-inflicted discipline, youth at times ran riot and urged Cecelia to the commission of many acts not at all compatible with the dignity of her position or her lofty intellectual pretensions. The orchards, berry patches and sweet smelling hay fields were responsible for many of her deviations from the college course, but that the handsome James Francis was also an active agent was fairly well known even before the veteran farmer made his next visit to the postoffice, and volunteered the information, "James Francis an' the fenian air gettin' kinder soc'ble; he's mowin' the long medder an' she's drivin' the machine. So sot on each other 'at they couldn't see me goin' by."

"She's a-drivin' James Francis ez waal ez the mower," laughed Mrs. Forbes. "You mark my words, Obediah, afore the snow blows the selectmen 'll hev the school on their hands. Shucks; the crossest grained old cormorant 'at ever lived 'ud jes' hev to smile seein' them young things go by. Lor', they don't know theirselves how far gone they are. It minds me of when Jabez an' me used ter come from meetin' ez if we wuz walkin' on air."

"You wuz faily matched," snarled the malcontent, "but this un thinks herself a cut above farmer; talks of goin' ter collidge; pity she wuz ever hired ter the Crik. If they're still in the medder I'm goin' ter hail 'em on my way back an' say suthin' ez 'ill rile 'em."

"Trust you fer thet, you old crosspatch," muttered Abe, who seemed to be a permanent part of the general store; "it's pizen fer some folks to see others enjyin' theirselves.

"There you go, you blame old meeschеef. I jes' hope ef you go meddlin' in the long medder you'l git yer legs twisted inter the mower an' cut off at the jints." And with this awful expression of his wrath Abe went to the door to watch the veteran's movements.

True to his intentions, Obadiah crossed the intervening fields, and, leaning on the fence inclosing the meadow, hellowed his hands into a trumpet, and bawled across:

"Hull-oo, James Francis! Help so scurse 'at you hev ter hire fenians?" Then without waiting for a reply ambled off, his shrill, crackling laugh adding to the annoyance of the haymakers.

"Don't you think you ought to apologize?" asked the girl, quickly regaining composure.

"For what?" He came round to the horses' heads, and from that vantage point looked steadily into the driver's eyes.

"For calling me a fenian; you were very unkind."

"I didn't mean to be," awkwardly; then humbly, "haven't I made up for it since?"

"But I was a stranger then," insisting on her injury. "That's why it hurt me so."

"I wouldn't hurt you for the world; you know that, Ceciliar."

The girl winced slightly; his pronunciation of her name was one of the little things that grated on her sensitive taste; but a superfluous letter or two lose force when the aggressor is handsome and spirited. That he was both she acknowledged inwardly and was moved to forgiveness. The moment was fraught with peril for the college scheme. It was receding steadily into the distance; James Francis saw his advantage and meanly pursued it.

"This is as good a time as any to come to an understanding. When I called you a fenian I hadn't even seen you. I don't know that I even knew what a fenian meant. I don't know yet, but of this I am sure, whether you are a nilihist, a fenian or an anarchist, or all three together, I love you."

The horses tossed their heads impatiently, and the man passed his hand soothingly over their glossy coats.

"Let's cut another swath," suggested the girl, irreverently.

"Not another blade," he declared, "until I have my answer. Yes or no?"

"Well, since you will have it, No!"

"You don't mean it; say you don't Ceciliar," he pleaded, humbly yet hopefully.

"I do mean it," she asserted, passionately. "I never meant to settle down on a farm. I want to go through college and write A. B. to my name."

"Write Journee instead," he said, with telling insistence. "Give up the school and come home to the farm. Say yes, dear; you'll never regret it."

The fringe of elms, shading the brook rippled through the interval, caught the rays of the setting sun and cast them back again like javelins of light; the girl was dimly aware that evening was on the land. The air was heavy with the fragrance of new-mown hay; shimmering banks of clouds sank down behind the treetops; the chirping of crickets and the far-off croaking of frogs down in the alder swamp mingled with the lowing of cows and the soft trilling of birds seeking their nests, the holy calm of nature soothed even the unrest of a wavering heart, and hushed into silence the promptings of ambition.

"Everything living is going home," said the girl very gently; "let us go, too; see, the sun is nearly gone."

"I am only waiting for my answer," he reminded her.

"Do you know Frank, that you have asked me to renounce the hope of a lifetime? I have struggled so for a higher education." There was a wistful intonation in her voice that love interpreted correctly. She was pleading to be saved from her less noble self.

"We will seek it together," he answered; "dear heart, life has only begun."

Before the snow blew over the meadows Mrs. Forbes' prediction came to pass. The young teacher returned to her city home, but not for long.

"I never thought I could settle down on a farm, mamma," she whispered, during one of the long confidential talks preceding the final going away; "but Frank is—so—so—different."

The mother's face was beautiful, as stroking the sunny head buried in her lap she answered very softly, "A woman's heart is a vexatious thing, my darling; its depths hold many a secret; but," with a tenderly indulgent smile, "love conquers all.—Mary B. O'Sullivan in Donohoe's Magazine.

SURPRISED THE ENGLISH VISITOR.

The Severe Criticisms Exchanged by Partisans at a Washington Banquet.

I. M. Weston, who is one of the chief pillars of the Michigan Democracy, though he originated in the Republican State of Maine, and who used to be mayor of Grand Rapids, and of late president of the Michigan board of world's fair managers, was chatting with his intimate friend, Private Secretary Thurber, the other evening at the Arlington, says the Washington Post. The conversation turned on the peculiarities of some specimens of the genus Briton who find their way to these shores and the difficulty they experience in getting at a correct understanding of our institutions.

"I shall never forget," said Mr. Weston, "a banquet that I attended at John Chamberlin's some time ago, in which an Englishman of some note in his country graced by his presence. The force bill was up for discussion in congress at the time, and, of course, was a general topic of talk everywhere. The stranger, who sat next to me, seemed rather worried by the earnestness with which the dinner party debated the subject, and said to me in a confidential way: 'I can't understand why you Americans seem never to talk about anything but politics. We choose other matters at social gatherings in my country—art, letters, women, horses, anything except politics; and for the life of me I can't make out what it is that your rival parties are contending over.'

"It happened that in the course of the evening some speeches were called for, and among those who responded was Hallet Kilbourn, who delivered a glowing eulogium on the Republican party, reciting its origin, its great triumphs the deeds of its famous leaders, and lambasting the Democrats for a thousand sins. Others spoke in somewhat similar vein, until at last it was discovered that I was the only Democrat present, and nothing would do but that the solitary exponent of Democracy should lift his voice in defense of his assailed party. It was done with all the vigor at the command of the speaker, and entering into the spirit of the occasion, I branded the Republicans as the perpetrators of a long series of crimes against the people, stigmatized them as the party of the classes versus the masses, and all that sort of thing that is often heard in heated campaigns.

"Everybody, except the gentleman from London, took the speeches at their real worth. He listened as one entranced and understood them as meant seriously. When I took my seat beside him again he seemed wrapped in thought, and for several minutes said nothing. Presently he leaned over and whispered in my ear:

"'I am glad we don't have any such politics in England, for d—— me if our politicians were as rascally a lot as yours, they'd all get in prison.'"

ELECTRICAL WAGON.

It Is now in Operation on the Streets of London.

The latest development of electric traction is the new electric parcel and advertising van for ordinary roads, now in use in London. By a careful arrangement the working parts are reduced to a minimum, leaving the whole of the interior of the body free for passenger or goods. The accumulators supplying the motive power are suspended in a special carrier beneath the body of the van, so that a recharged set may be substituted in two minutes without interfering with the contents of the van. The steering gear, which is of the greatest importance, is said to be satisfactory, the driver having perfect control of the vehicle. The van is also lighted by electricity, and is controlled by a single switch, giving six degrees of speed. An estimate shows that the cost of working a van by electricity, equal to a two-horse vehicle, including charging, maintenance, etc., is about 4 cents per mile. The car runs about thirty miles with each charge.—Philadelphia Record.

A Similar Feeling.

Husband—No, Mary; you can never accuse me of meanness. I paid $25 for that hat and $75 for that dress. I always like to see my wife well dressed.

Wife (kindly)—And I like to see you look well, too, Henry. Give me that hat, and I'll touch up those rusty spots with this shoe blacking.—Puck.

WHAT THE WITS SAY.

BRIGHT PRODUCTIONS OF THE HUMORISTS.

Good Hunting.

A Detroit nimrod who went down to the Monroe marshes the other day for a little shooting, encountered a boy on a raft who was baited for crabs, and the nimrod tossed him a nickel and inquired:

"Boy, is there shooting around here?"

"Yaas."

"Seen any snipe?"

"Yaas."

"Will you put me on?"

"Yaas. If you go to shoot over this way you'll hit dad, who's after frogs, and dad is mean when anybody fires birdshot into him. If you shoot over there you'll pepper my brother Bill, who's got a line out after dog-fish. Bill allus raises a rumpus when he gits shot. Over that way is whar' ma is hunting for a lost calf, and if you pepper her dad will want $500 damages."

"But I can fire in all other directions, can I?"

"Yaas; but aim purty high, as the rest of the seven children is scattered around after roots or fish bait, and we have to drive three miles to reach a graveyard."—Detroit Free Press.

"Nothing to Speak of."

Broke.

The afternoon sun fell aslant of the street car and illuminated the ears of the off horse with an aureola of glory.

No one would call her pretty, and it is doubtful if she could command more than $3 a week at a soda-water fountain.

But her hair rippled back from a broad, low forehead, and that cuts quite a figure these lays.

"Allow me to offer you my seat."

"Oh, thank you."

The youth stood a moment, dazed. Then he fled and walked the streets for four hours with quick, nervous tread.

"In justice to myself I must," he muttered.

With resolute face he proceeded to the home of his fiancee, whom he informed, briefly, that there was less of disparity between the ideal and the actual in woman than he had supposed, and would she kindly learn to forget him.

Hope Springs Eternal, Etc.

An old maid at least seventy years of age was helped into a chair in the office of a New York police justice. She was very much excited.

"Do I understand you to say that you think your pocket was picked by a young man who sat alongside of you in a Third avenue car?"

"Yes, I'm sure of it. He squeezed me up in the corner so that I could scarcely breathe, and he kept smiling at me, and smiling at me, as if he knew me."

"Why did you permit him to do that. Why did you not complain to the conductor?" asked the justice.

"I—I—"

"Out with it."

"I thought perhaps he was—he was—"

"Was what?"

"Going to propose to me."

Hard Luck.

Oh, Moses vos all ridt. He vill be a highly resbegded citizen some days.—New York Mercury.

A Faithless Lot.

Fanny—I dreamt about you last night.

Jennie—What did you dream?

"I dreamt that the young man to whom you were engaged had gone back on you."

"I dare say it is so. You can't rely on young men nowadays. Only woman is faithful to her love. So you dreamt my would-be husband went back on me? I wonder whether it is Charlie? He was here night before last and I noticed that he was cold and distant. I think, perhaps, it was Dick; he always was a flirt. I have never trusted him. I wonder if Frank has had the meanness to jilt me for that lavender-haired girl he took to the theater? Ah, that's the way these men are. You can't rely on three or four young men, much less on one."

Maimed.

In the calm of evening the old man was driving home the cows.

His mind dwelt on other days. He saw the fresh, healthy face of his only son turned in farewell for a moment, then gone, perhaps forever.

"It was the call of duty," the father murmured. "It is not for me to repine."

"My boy, my boy."

He raised his eyes.

He was come again. A wan face instead of the glow of health, an empty sleeve, a crutch, but it was he.

"Yes," the youth explained, "I have my degree all right. I'm a trifle shy on legs and arms, but I'd like to call your attention to my hair. Ain't she a beaut?"

Drawing his diploma from his bosom, he showed that he spoke truly.

Concession.

The great man with white side whiskers setting off his red neck couldn't think of it.

"I'm very sorry," he repeated, "but $7 a week is all I can afford to pay you."

The youth with pallid features and a longing look, lingered at the threshold.

"May I—"

He turned yet again to plead.

"—refer to my remuneration as salary instead of wages without fear of contradiction by you?"

There was a long and painful silence, after which the youth crept away, and despair was written all over his face.

There.

"Fair, fair, with golden hair."

He took the second seat from the head of the table in a sort of trance

"Fair, fair, with golden hair."

The words of the song rang in his ears. His thoughts were far away. Men spoke to him, but he heard them not. Women told him it was a beautiful day, but the information fell upon deaf ears.

"Fair, fair, with golden hair."

They brought him food. He started violently and looked furtively about him.

"Fare, fare, with golden hair."

Yes, there it was, two strands of it in the Irish stew.

The Pinch.

Her eyes were red with weeping.

"Unkind fate," she moaned.

The man who was tearing his hair at the other side of the room acquiesced.

"But there is no alternative," he said, in a hollow voice. "Sign."

He pointed to the paper before her. With trembling hand she took the pen.

"We've got to mortgage the home," he continued, "or take less ice each morning, and we must keep up appearances."

With a quick, dry sob, she wrote her name.

On Olympus.

Clio was doing most of the talking

"I beg your pardon," suddenly interrupted Melpomene.

The muse of history was at no pains to conceal her irritation.

"You wouldn't say that," she exclaimed petulantly, "if it wasn't that I have the reputation of repeating myself."

Terpsichore, who was practicing a new form of the York, laughed softly to herself.

Lame.

Her lashes drooped upon her suffused cheek.

"Are you prepared?" he demanded, in low, thrilling tones, "to stand before the world and declare your love for me?"

She gasped.

"No, no," she faltered, "not yet."

"Why, darling?"

Her head sank upon his shoulder.

"My vaccination took," she whispered.

Marriage in High Life.

There are people in New York who toady after the rich. The following conversation took place in a Third avenue street car:

"So your sister is married?"

"Yes, and she did very well—splendid. You have heard of Vanderbilt?"

"Oh, yes. Did she marry into that family?"

"Well, yes, so to speak. She married a nephew of Vanderbilt's chief cook. He is the driver of a street car."

Indifferent.

"Do you approve of early marriages?"

The vision in the hammock paused a moment ere replying.

"Yes," she murmured at last, "I can say that I do. A woman can dress the same in the afternoon as in the evening these days."

In the falling shadows she looked strangely beautiful.

Forewarned.

They were personal enemies.

"Sir," exclaimed the leading lady, as they stood together at the front of the stage, while the gallery held its breath, "I defy you to do your worst."

"Ha," said the villain aside, "she must know of eggs in the audience."

Turning then, he shouted aloud, and triumphantly:

"Never!"

Gilks—Of course. The human race is not so bad as some would make out.

Worry and Indigestion.

Worry is a baneful curse and source of untold evils. It seams the face with lines and furrows and has a most depressing effect upon that hyper-sensitive organ, the stomach, which at such times becomes a most unwilling and laggard servant. Indeed, it is safe to say unless encouraged by a cheerful temper and bright, or at least hopeful, thoughts, the stomach will play truant or sulk and do no work which it can shrink. The physiological explanation of this is the close alliance of the great sympathetic nerves, which are worse than the telegraph for carrying bad news; the worry and anxiety which depress the brain produce simultaneously a semi-paralysis of the nerves of the stomach, gastric juices will not flow and—presto! there is indigestion. One sign of mental health is serenity of temper and a self-control that enables us to bear with equanimity and unruffled temper the petty trials and jars of life, especially those arising from contact with scolding, irascible, irritating folk. It is well to remember at such times that these unfortunates are their own worst enemies, and a cultivation of the art of not hearing will help us very much. It is a very useful art all through life and well worth some trouble to acquire.—Demorest's Magazine.

The Doll of Colored Children.

Did any one ever see little colored girls playing with any other sort of dolls than white ones? Perhaps such little girls sometimes have black dolls, but the writer often sees them at their doll play in a street which is almost exclusively inhabited by colored people, and has never seen them with any but white dolls. Generally the dolls are quite blonde. It is not for want of black dolls in the stores; they are numerous enough, and are much favored by white girls. The reason for it is of course, a very pathetic story—the long story of a race enslaved and despised until it has to a great extent lost its pride in itself and come to court another by a habit which is second nature. The mulattoes and quadroons are given a certain precedence and honor by the blacks, and the little mulatto girls will have none but white dolls, and blondes at that!—Boston Transcript.

"Yes, and I guess you had too many nightcaps inside of you."

An Indian Trader tells his story of Kickapoo Indian Sagwa.

Cured of a Distressing Stomach Difficulty.

RUSHVILLE, NEB., June. 5

Some time ago after suffering severely with stomach trouble and dyspepsia, which had been greatly aggravated by the alkali water of the western country, and when I had reached that stage where I could frequently hold nothing on my stomach, and would even throw up water as soon as drank, I learned from a Sioux Indian, who had been on a visit to the Kickapoo tribe, of a wonderful remedy called "Sagwa." I got him to procure some for me. The effect was remarkable. I tried to get more from the Indian, but he would not let me have more of his. He prized it so much he would not give it up. I then learned that Healy & Bigelow, of New Haven, Conn., had an arrangement with the Kickapoo tribe, and was putting their remedies on the market. I sent and got a bottle of the Kickapoo Indian Sagwa, and found it to be the same as that I had procured from the Sioux Indian. I got more, and after the use of a few bottles, I was not only relieved but entirely cured, and have stayed cured ever since.

I can eat anything set before me. Salt bacon, which used to have a most distressing effect, I can now eat and relish like an Indian.

I cannot speak too highly of the Kickapoo remedies, and cheerfully recommend them to anyone.

AWARDED TO

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award was given on every claim, comprising superiority in leavening power, keeping properties, purity and excellence. The verdict has been given by the best jury ever assembled for such a purpose, backed by the recommendation of the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who made an elaborate examination and test of all the baking powders. This is pre-eminently the highest authority on such matters in America.

This verdict conclusively settles the question and proves that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is superior in every way to any other brand.

NOTE—The Chief Chemist rejected the Alum Powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considered them unwholesome.

"The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table."

Dr. Price's is peculiarly adapted for export, as neither long sea voyages nor climatic changes affect it. Will keep fresh and sweet for years.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER is the standard for purity and perfection the world over, and is beyond comparison. Its purity and goodness are household words. Always full weight. Never varies. Never disappoints.

It is a fact that certain envious manufacturers of Baking Powder, who lack the temerity to even place their goods in competition with Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder at the World's Fair, have, since it closed, advertised that they actually received an award. To an enlightened, appreciative public, comment on such an unfair and reprehensible act is quite unnecessary.

How Cream of Tartar is Made.

Cream of Tartar—which enters so largely into the manufacture of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder—is obtained from the tart wines of France, Germany, Austria, etc. The Crude Tartar, called Argols, is deposited on the sides of the wine casks during the fermentation of the wine. After the wine is drawn off this crystal deposit is removed, dried and exported to America, where the elaborate process of refining goes on, producing the snow-white crystals of Cream of Tartar. Specimens of this product, in all its conditions, from the crude Argols in its original wine cask to the purified and refined article embodied in Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder, were shown at the Price Baking Powder Company's late exhibit in the Agricultural Building, World's Columbian Exposition.

NOTE—The Cream of Tartar Refinery controlled by the Price Baking Powder Company is the most complete and extensive in the world.

Cherished in Memory.

The unusually fine weather of Wednesday made Memorial day a great success. In the morning the graves of the dead heroes buried in Evergreen cemetery were decorated with flowers and flags, as is the custom, by Pap Thomas Post G. A. R. and the Ladies Relief Corps. A large number of people assembled at the cemetery to witness these exercises which are so impressive and solemn. The graves of many not connected with the war were also decorated with flowers and evergreens and the effect although solemn was very pretty. The G. A. R. post after preforming their duty marched back to their hall on Sixth street.

The city presented a very gay appearance, there being an abundance of bunting and flag decorations on nearly all the business buildings and also many private residences. Thousands of people thronged the streets, the public offices, banks and business places being closed. In the afternoon the base ball game and gun club shoot drew large crowds to the fair grounds, but these attractions did not deteriorate from the parade which took place at 2:30 as follows:

The police force under Chief Wm. Barron.
Mayor Hemstead, Municipal Judge Chiperfield, the city council and the chaplain and orators of the day in carriages.
The City Band.
The Drum Corps.
Pap Thomas Post.
The Fire Department, with a handsomely mounted brass cannon in front.
The Ancient Order of Hibernians.
The Baptist Boys' Brigade.
Citizens on foot and in carriages.

The column moved under the direction of Commander Congdon, assisted by Adjutant N. M. Paine and Wagon Master Barclay, and marched to the High School, where the flag was saluted, and the school children of the First, Fourth and Fifth wards joined the procession, walking on the sidewalks. The column then marched north on Eighth street to Front street, where the school children of the the Second and Third wards joined the procession. Thence the column marched west on Front street to Sixth street, thence north on Sixth street to the City Park, where the exercises took place according to the following PROGRAM.

Music by the Band.
Address by Rev. Father Lynch.
Song by school children.
Recitation, "Our Army of the Dead," by Miss Maggie E. Potter.

The attendance at the Park was one of the largest ever seen there on occasions of this kind, the number of people present being estimated at 3,000. After the program was completed the people dispersed, and Pap Thomas Post marched back to the hall and broke ranks.

Corker of a Caucus.

Resolved by the council of the City of Brainerd:

That the plat and survey of the proposed improvement in the matter of opening and extending Sixth street in the City of Brainerd, south from the south line of Willow street in a straight line to the south section line of section 36, town 45, range 31, made and presented to the city council by the city engineer, pursuant to an order of the city council, adopted on the 7th day of May, A. D. 1894, be and the same is hereby adopted by the city council, as showing correctly the character and extent of the improvement actually agreed upon and ordered by the city council, and such plat and survey is directed to be filed with the city clerk of said city.

And that Michel Hagberg, James S. Gardner and W. D. McKay all freeholders of said city, no two of whom reside in the same ward, be and they are hereby appointed commissioners to view the premises and to ascertain and award the amount of damages and compensation to be paid to the owners of property which is to be taken or injured by such improvement, and to assess the amount of such damages and compensation and the expense of the improvement upon the land and property to be benefited by such improvement, in proportion to the benefits to be received by each parcel and without regard to cash valuation, but not exceeding the actual benefits to any property so assessed.

Passed May 28th, 1894.

A similar resolution was also passed in regard to the widening of Willow and Seventh streets.

Married.

The wedding of Miss Mamie Holmes, of this city, to G. W. Farnsworth occured at Rochester on Wednesday of last week. The many Brainerd friends of the couple extend congratulations.

At the house of the bride's parents on 7th street north on Saturday morning, May 26th, 1894, R. G. Valentine to Miss Ivy Smith, Rev. Geo. West officiating. The bride and groom are well known to all our readers and congratulations are in order Mr. and Mrs. Valentine went immediately to housekeeping on Kingwood street in a home which had been made ready for their reception before the wedding occured.

A very pretty wedding occurred yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at the Episcopal church, Joseph R. Westfall and Miss Elisabeth Bessie Small being the contracting parties. The ceremony was preformed by Rev. G. H. Davis and was witnessed by hosts of friends of the bride and groom. Miss Winnie Small was bridesmaid and Herman Casey the groom's best man. After the ceremony was over the wedding party went directly to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Small, where an elaborate banquet was served. The wedding party remained with the bride and groom until the departure of the 1:15 train on which they were passengers bound for Kansas City where they will spend their honeymoon returning to Brainerd in two weeks which will be their home in the future as in the past. Mr. Westfall is the junior member of the firm of Westfall Bros., gents furnishers, and has lived in this city for many years, the bride being a charming young lady with a large circle of admiring friends. The DISPATCH wishes them health, happiness and prosperity and a safe return to their Brainerd home.

Ward Committee.

Committees for the different wards have been appointed as follows.

THIRD WARD—Wm. Williamson, J. McDonald and Louis Goodell.

FIFTH WARD—R. H. Paine, A. E. Veon, Henry Mahle.

Lured to Ruin.

Mention was made in this paper last week of the fact that the mother of two girls named Augusta and Stella Zievertowski came to this city from Little Falls and induced her daughters to turn from the life of shame they were leading here and return to their home with her. It now appears that two young men of that city, James Lemiux and Charles Baldi, have been arrested charged with the seduction of the girls.

The Little Falls Transcrit says: The girls have gained cosiderable notoriety during the past few weeks by being found in Cora Carey's house at Brainerd. After considerable persuasion their mother induced them to return home and then they entered their complaints.

Lemieux is a familiar chacter in this city and for a long time has been what is known as a "tin-horn" gambler. During the palmy days of gamblers he ran a game over Baldi's place. By his actions in the past he has brought disgrace upon his parents who are honest and respectable people.

Charles Baldi runs a confectionary store in the Vasaly building on Broadway. He is a sort of chum of Lemieux and generally has a crowd of the "crap" element around him.

The store of Beach, Cole & Beach in the sleeper block was broken into and relieved of some of the contents in broad daylight Sunday afternoon, the work undoubtedly being that of boys. An entrance was gained by breaking out a light of glass in the rear of the building in the store room after which it was an easy matter to gain access to the store. Mr. Cole came down to the store in the afternoon and discovered cigars and sweet chocolate scattered over the floor. This caused him to look the building over and he found that the thieves had taken a quantity of cigars, about six pounds of climax plug tobacco, two boxes of gum and several packages of sweet chocolate. Whoever the light fingered gentry were they were probably scared away by Mr. Cole's entrance to the store as he heard the back doors shut as he came in and the articles were probably dropped in their hurry to get away.

Not Scotch Enough.

It is said that never was there a greater enthusiast over his own countrymen than Sir David Wilkie, the the celebrated Scotch artist. One amusing story connected with this trait of his character was told by Henry Thomson, who afterward grew to be quite a friend of Wilkie's.

"Thomson! Ye maun be a Scotch Thomson, I'll warrant," said Sir David as they sat together for the first time at an academy dinner.

"I am of that ilk," was the reply.

"My father was a Scotchman."

"Was he, really?" exclaimed Wilkie, grasping the other's hand warmly.

"And my mother was Irish."

"Aye, aye, was she really?" and the hand relaxed its grasp a trifle.

"And I was born in England."

Upon that Wilkie dropped his new friend's hand and almost turned his back upon him. His disappointment was so evident that Thomson actually felt regret instead of indignation at this treatment and later on endeavored to counteract the effect of his unfortunate nationality. But for that day Wilkie had no further desire to talk to him and showed it plainly.—Youth's Companion.
